Farm Relief Bill Sent to President

SENATE GIVES UP DEBENTURES BY VOTE OF 74 TO 8

Measure Embodies Hoover Program.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Washington, D. C., June 14.—(Special.)—The farm relief bill is ready for President Hoover's signature. The two months' fight in congress over its passage ended today when both houses approved the conference report and the signatures of Vice President Curtis and Speaker Longworth were attached.

The senate voted, 74 to 8, in favor of exactly the same conference report which it rejected, 43 to 46, last Tuesday. The action followed more than three hours of explanations by senators who took part in the unsuccessful attempt to force the administration to accept the export debenture scheme. The house accepted the conference report without debate and without a roll call.

Battle Leaves Sore Spots.

The final result is a sweeping victory for President Hoover, who obtains enactment of a farm bill in exact accord with his recommendations. The bill, however, left sore spots which will trouble during the tariff revision and in coming campaigns. President Hoover may sign the bill tomorrow. Before congress recesses, which probably will be next Tuesday, he will transmit a budget recommendation for a substantial immediate appropriation from the authorized $600 million revolving loan fund. The bill as it goes to the President is regarded by him as fulfilling the desire of the Kansas City platform, declarations of radical Republicans and Democrats to the contrary notwithstanding. It creates a farm board composed of the secretary of agriculture and eight members appointed by the President at salaries of $12,000. One of the appointive members will be designated by the President as chairman.

Will Announce Board Soon.

The President is not restricted in his choice of a geographical or political party in making appointments, but he is expected to make the board representative of major agricultural commodities. It is expected that the personnel of the board will be announced within ten days.

The board is to undertake the solution of various agricultural problems. In carrying out its policies it will have the assistance of commodity advisory councils of seven members each and stabilization corporations which will be set up to deal with particular commodities whenever the cooperative handling such commodities so request. All stock in the stabilization corporations will be owned by cooperative associations.

$60 Millions Available.

The $60 million revolving fund is to be available for loans to stabilize prices of agricultural products and to stabilize the market for surplus farm products. The bulk of the money is designed for the former in financing the purchase and storage of surplus farm products, pending a favorable opportunity to market them without loss. The surplus of the legislation must that the government will not suffer any substantial losses. Critics of the bill think that either the government will have huge sums or else the stabilization corporations will fail to boost prices. Besides making loans to handle crop surpluses, the board may advance money for various other purposes, including the purchase or construction of physical marketing facilities and the financing of crop price insurance funds.

Critics Doubt Its Efficacy.

In today's senate debate, the debenture advocates, who were forced to fall into line for the administration program after yesterday's vote in the house against the debenture plan, predicted that the new measure will accomplish little, if anything, toward a solution of farm problems. They excoriated their final votes for it on the ground that it represented a step toward adequate farm relief legislation.

Of the 74 senators who lined up for the conference report, 47 were Republicans and 27 Democrats. Three Republicans and five Democrats opposed it. The three Republicans were Senators Robert M. La Follette (Wis.), Peter Norbeck (S. D.), and W. B. Fiske (Okla.). It was announced that two additional Republicans, John J. Dingell (Mich.) and W. H. McMaster (Iowa), had also opposed it.

Melody Farm Made Club for Millionaires

BY AL CHASE.

Melody farm, former home of the late J. Ogden Armour and one of the best known country estates in Chicago, which was sold a year ago by Mrs. Armour to a syndicate of wealthy Chicagoans headed by Samuel Insull, is to be transformed into one of America's most exclusive combination business and country clubs. The old Italian style residence, until a few weeks ago occupied by Mrs. Armour, is to be used as a clubhouse. The new club will have a national membership of millionaires—a selected few from most of the big cities—who will be able to combine golf and business in a manner of national significance in under way or an important deal is to be swung, without the worry of dodging financial editors around La Salle street.

Plans Still Incomplete.

Britton I. Budd, president of the Chicago Rapid Transit and other Insull properties, said the club-development was not far enough along to make public at this time a formal announcement. The name of the new organization has not yet been decided upon.

Melody farm was purchased by a group of twenty-six men who paid a reported $2,500,000 for the 846 acre estate through John Griffith & Son of Lake Forest. In addition to Mr. Insull and Mr. Budd, the syndicate comprises Arthur Reynolds, George M. Reynolds, and others. The estate was sold by Mrs. Armour to help settle her husband's debts to Armour & Co.

May Erect Residences.

At the time of the purchase it was stated that the twenty-six new owners would each take a proportionate share of the acreage for homes. The club idea has changed this plan, although it is understood that later on many of the group may erect residences overlooking the golf course now being laid out.

J. Ogden Armour assembled his famous estate by purchasing five tracts from a quintette of Irishmen. One of these was Martin Melody, who lived in a brick house on the largest of the five parcels. Mr. Armour christened his big estate Melody farm and was thereafter constantly being annoyed by seeing it printed as Melody farm.

FIREMEN BATTLE DEATH 45 HOURS; BABY IMPROVED

After forty-five hours of constant effort a fire department inhalator squad was still working early this morning to keep the spark of life in 16 months old Raymond Di Chiara, son of Joseph Di Chiara, a watchman living at 1031 George street. Dr. John Pihotta of the Illinois Masonic hospital, who first called the squad at 10 o'clock Thursday morning as a last resort, said he had hope for the baby's recovery from his attack of bronchial pneumonia. The child was sleeping. Tank after tank of oxygen has been exhausted by the squad, working in shifts to keep the flow through the hood covering the baby's face at the desired volume. Once yesterday morning the small patient went into a relapse. The firemen worked diligently, and presently a faint flush of color came back to the child's face. Dr. Pihotta pronounced him at the point of death just before he called. Thirty small tanks of oxygen had been exhausted yesterday afternoon. Last night tanks of a much greater capacity were obtained and were being used by the squad, working under the direction of Capt. John Scanlon.

Novice Flyer, Up 2d Time, Falls; May Die

Skimming southward in the twilight a thousand feet above Waukegan in a plane which the owner had hidden him to use, Harry Gartley, 26 years old, ended the second solo flight of his career—and perhaps his own life—at the northern limits of that city last evening.

His close friend, Joseph Brockson, and the latter's wife were in their front yard on Holdridge road, Waukegan, waving applause of Gartley's performance when the novice pilot, a former ground mechanic in the machine corps, leaned far out of the cockpit to salute them. The engine hummed as the plane banked and rose above the ground, clipping the branches of a tall elm as it fell.

May Have Tried Landing.

Whether Gartley ventured a spectacular landing to thrill his friends or found the ship unmanageable after momentarily relinquishing the controls was speculative. To Brockson the smooth but terrifically swift descent appeared intentional until the crash. The pilot, himself, with a basal skull fracture and internal injuries, was unconscious at the Victory Memorial hospital. Surgeons doubted he would survive.

When Gartley arrived half an hour earlier at the Waukegan airport on the Green Bay road attendants remarked that he appeared tipsy. His young wife, Laura, begged him not to go up alone, but he spun the propeller of the Curtiss OX 5 engine began to sputter as he climbed into the cockpit.

Forbidden to Use Plane.

Joseph Andrus, an air minded worker in a Waukegan meat market and the owner of the plane, told Sheriff Lawrence Doolittle that Gartley had lunched into the butcher shop in mid-afternoon and informed Andrus he was going to the airport "to look around." Convinced that Gartley was drunk and fearing he would attempt a solo flight without permission, as he had once before, Andrus warned the novice pilot not to take his plane. Gartley, the son of a conductor of the North Shore line, graduated from the Waukegan Township High School in 1921 and spent the next two years in the Marine corps. Since then he had been a mechanic in a Waukegan machine shop, lived at 122 South Chapel street, Waukegan, and spent most of his spare time at the airport.

UPROAR IN CITY COUNCIL DEBATE ON INSULL QUIZ

Albert Opens Fire on Ettelson.

Out of a fiery debate at yesterday's council meeting, in which the name of Samuel Insull, millionaire public utility operator, figured prominently, grew the announcement of Ald. Arthur Albert [43d] that he will ask State's Attorney Swanson today to investigate the office of Corporation Counsel Samuel A. Ettelson.

In the midst of the aldermanic turmoil, when excitement was at its highest pitch, a practical joker tossed a freerack under the seat of Louis B. Anderson, colored alderman from the Second ward. Its reverberation in the council chamber caused a new disorder which took several minutes of gavel pounding by Mayor Thompson to quiet.

Albert Throws Gauntlet.

Ald. Albert threw the gauntlet to the administration in the form of a resolution asking the mayor to appoint a committee of five aldermen to co-operate with a proposed special committee of the United States senate to investigate public utility affairs. The two hour battle which followed showed an apparent division in the ranks of the Democrats.

Albert, once ousted from the council by the mayor's forces, seemed on the verge of putting through the resolution. Through a parliamentary twist interjected by Ald. John A. Mason (48th), of the same political faction as Albert, the latter lost.

By a vote of 14 to 10 Ald. Albert succeeded in having the rules of the council suspended so that his resolution could be passed without reference to a committee first. The council then recessed for an hour to discuss the tax problem and when it reconvened the alderman's majority had vanished. James W. Bresn, first assistant corporation counsel, was credited in remarks on the floor of the council with being the lobbyist who had swayed the votes in the interim.

Amendment Spoils Chance.

The battle was waged over the following clause of the resolution: "Such an inquiry undoubtedly will show what relationships exist between certain public officials and public utility interests known as the Insull interests." Ald. Mason introduced an amendment eliminating the name of Insull. This change, under a parley of amendments, best for Albert the advantage he had gained in obtaining a suspension of the rules.

"The Chicago Railways company, a going concern, goes into a receivership," said Ald. Albert, introducing his resolution. "It is time that this council should do something, but not with appropriations of $100,000 [referring to a fund for the corporation counsel recommended to the council yesterday]. If we can't get honest aid from the corporation counsel we should go to the expense of hiring a good attorney."

The Stokers from the Temple.

Dome transactions are more conspicuous than public utility interests in Chicago," Albert continued. "I am sometimes inclined to think that the mayor would do the right thing if he properly informed by his advisers."

Nelson Puts Up Fight.

Ald. Oscar P. Nelson (44th), the mayor's floor leader, tried to turn the tide of battle by having the resolution referred to a committee. He succeeded after the tax discussion recess when the administration succeeded in adding the votes of eleven aldermen to the ten who had voted before the recess. The ten aldermen who first voted against the change in rules were:

- | | |
|-----------------|-----------------|
| Ward. Aldermen. | Ward. Aldermen. |
| 1. Campbell. | 14. O'Leary. |
| 2. Anderson. | 15. Parnell. |
| 3. Jackson. | 16. Sloan. |
| 4. Cronan. | 17. Folger. |
| 5. Nelson. | 18. Nelson. |
| 6. Zeman. | 19. Kahl. |
| 7. O'Connell. | 20. Shaw. |

The eleven who joined these ten in the final test which caused the resolution to be referred were:

- | | |
|-----------------|-----------------|
| Ward. Aldermen. | Ward. Aldermen. |
| 11. Wilson. | 27. Van Norman. |
| 12. Byrne. | 28. Kunkel. |
| 13. Koss. | 29. Kunkel. |
| 14. Northrup. | 30. Kahl. |
| 15. O'Connell. | 31. Shaw. |

"The resolution only asks to have a committee appointed to cooperate with Senator Norris," said Ald. Joseph B. McDonough (11th), chairman of the transit committee during the two hour debate. "There is no harm in that and nothing to quibble about. If there is something wrong here the council should look into it. You can't

Townsmen of Virkula Ask Hoover's Help

BULLETIN.

St. Paul, Minn., June 14.—(AP.)—L. L. Brill, United States district attorney here, announced tonight he had been authorized by Attorney General William D. Mitchell to petition for the removal to the federal courts of the case of E. J. White, border customs patrolman, if White claims he was performing his duty when he killed Henry Virkula.

BY ORVILLE DWYER.

International Falls, Minn., June 14.—(Special.)—This border community, through a group of its business and professional men and county and city officials, tonight appealed to President Hoover for protection against the lawlessness of the prohibition enforcement agents stationed at the Canadian line.

The leading men of the town met in the city council chamber. A long message to the President was drawn up. It recited the abuses, brutalities, shootings and threats of the dry law enforcers. It ended with, "For God's sake, help us."

While the citizens were taking that action, State's Attorney David Hurlburt was before Judge J. H. Brown in the city court demanding the charge of second degree manslaughter against Emmet J. White, customs patrolman who last Saturday night shot and killed Henry Virkula, Big Falls confectioner.

Bond Raised to $5,000.

White was rearrested on a charge of second degree murder and his bonds raised from $1,500 to $5,000. Prosecutor Hurlburt went from the courtroom direct to the citizens' meeting and affixed his signature to the message to the President.

The message follows: "We, the undersigned citizens of the city of International Falls, Minn., on the Canadian border, are appealing to you in a matter that we regard as a desperate situation. We are making this call for help to you first of all because you are the first law enforcement officer of our nation, and secondly, because your subordinates, even unto an assistant secretary of the treasury, have failed us."

"The situation is this. In recent months the treasury department has put forth special efforts to enforce the prohibition laws in this territory. As good citizens we have heartily approved of this plan to enforce the laws of our country and have given our support to every legal method of enforcement and will continue to do so.

Civil Authority Overturned.

"In order to accomplish his worthy intention, the treasury department has seen fit to assign to this territory an unusually large number of enforcement agents, especially patrolmen of the customs service.

"These agents, however, instead of enforcing activities within the limits of their authority and mission, have usurped civil authority they do not possess, and have in innumerable instances violated the constitutional rights of the citizens of this community.

"One of these agents, within the week, murdered one of our respected and reputable fellow citizens. This outrage culminated a long series of indignities perpetrated against us and our city by many of these agents.

"These unprecedented abuses have included the promiscuous and un-called for use of riot guns, commonly known as sawed off shotguns, the raking of innocents lives by the unwarranted discharge of pistols, the usurpation of police authority in matters wholly unrelated to prohibition enforcement, the bully ragging of pedestrians and motorists on our streets and even threats to murder or do bodily injury to various of our policemen, including our police chief.

"In our utter helplessness, terror, and distraction we are at last resorting to the only method of self-defense which we have left.

"We have no other recourse but to appeal to you, Mr. President, for help. We are proud of him."

DRY GAS TANKS END PARIS HOP; FIND STOWAWAY

BULLETIN.

BORDEAUX, France, June 15.—(AP.)—A wireless message from Santander, Spain, this morning announced that the trans-Atlantic plane, The Yellow Bird, expected to leave Comillas for Le Bourget at 1 p. m. (8 a. m. Chicago daylight saving time.)

U. S. Boy Hid Aboard
Yellow Bird.

SANTANDER, Spain, June 14.—The French trans-Atlantic monoplane Yellow Bird made a safe landing on the beach near Comillas, thirty-four miles from Santander, at 8 o'clock tonight. Jean Assollant, Rene Lefevre, and Armeno Lotti Jr., had covered five-sixths of the distance from Old Orchard, Me., to Paris, when lack of gasoline obliged them to come down. They will start for Paris as soon as they obtain a supply of gasoline and apparatus used in starting the propeller.

The Yellow Bird covered the 3,125 miles from Old Orchard to Comillas in 29 hours and 53 minutes, at an average speed of about 108 miles an hour.

There was a fourth passenger on the plane, a young stowaway, Arthur Schreiner of Portland, Me., who had crept into the body of the plane just before it took off from the Maine seacoast yesterday morning.

Huns Into Violent Tempest.

Lotti said the crossing had been bad for the last two-thirds of the way. Clouds, wind, rain, and cold hampered the aviators and during the latter part of their flight they had to withstand a violent tempest which lasted more than four hours.

They were unable to carry out their intention of following the ocean liner route but in an endeavor to escape the storms they were obliged to swing towards the south. When they got in sight of the continent they followed the coast of Portugal looking for a suitable landing place. The search led them across Cape Finisterre to the southern coast of Spain. At Comillas they saw a wide level beach where they made an excellent landing. They were warmly received by inhabitants who covered them with flowers.

Assollant, Lefevre, and Lotti were taken by car to Santander along with the stowaway, Schreiner. They appeared in good condition after their trying ordeal and following dinner at Hotel Beale, they returned to the beach to put their airplane in shape.

Stowaway Promised Good Time.

COMILLAS, Spain, June 14.—(U. P.)—Jedn Assollant, who married a New York chorus girl, Miss Pauline Parker, a few days ago, and his companions on the Yellow Bird were in high spirits as they discussed their flight over the Atlantic. Their gas gave out just as they reached the rocky beach at Comillas and Assollant referred to that "coincidence" as their last and probably most important piece of luck. There were only a few drops of fuel left in the tanks when the plane rolled to a stop in the sand.

Although Assollant blamed young Schreiner for their failure to complete the projected flight, he appeared very much attached to the boy and refused to turn him over to police.

"He shared our risks and he is one of us now," said the French pilot. "We will see that he sees all there is to see in Paris and then send him home on a steamship. He is a navy lad, a typical American boy. We are proud of him."

Pilot Tells of Flight.

Assollant told the story of his flight as he was led to the hotel at Comillas by a cheering mob of people. Officials of the town accompanied the flyers to the hotel and the youthful stowaway brought up the rear—trying to decide whether to look proud or sheepish, but certainly looking as though he had the world at his feet.

"We had a fine trip and it was wholly uneventful except for this youngster bolting up islands. Then hard winds forced us to change our course and swing southward rather than pass well to the north of the islands. That extra mileage and the stowaway's extra weight caused us to use up our gasoline.

Fighting headwinds off the European coast, we decided to go as far as possible before our gas gave out. It was a happy coincidence that a nice stony beach permitted us to land when there were just a few drops left. We developed some motor trouble just before landing and it was not so easy to have some small spare parts brought here from Le Bourget flying field (near Paris) before we can continue to Paris Saturday. We hope to start at noon.

His in Tail of Machine.

Schreiber put himself in the tail of the machine about four hours prior to the start at a spot in which we intended to place foodstuffs.

When we tried to balance the plane on the runway on the night it was rather heavy towards the tail and we had to force full speed to take off.

Armed Lotti, baker and radio man of the flight, continued the story.

"Was Schreiber afraid? Well—so and so—you know, it was a bad storm we went through in midocean, and when we dropped 3,000 feet in an air pocket, that would scare any one, he became a bit nervous. He said: 'We won't come out of this.'

"But altogether he was a lucky mascot. We'll take him to Paris."

Paris Crowds Disappointed.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

PARIS, June 14.—(U.P.)—The mid-night did the waiting thousands at Le Bourget field learn that the Yellow Bird had made a safe landing at Comillas, Spain.

After long hours filled with alarms and rumors of all kinds, through the loud speaker Commandant Benoit roared out that Armand Lotti Jr., Jean Assollant and Rene Lefevre and an uninvited passenger had come to earth at 8 o'clock at Comillas, in the Spanish coast west of Santander, and there would refill their tanks with gasoline and take off for Paris at the earliest possible moment.

Then, and only then, did the crowd that had waited since early evening disperse after a little ragged cheer. The crowd that came to hail the three French pilots numbered thousands, but was a handful and very demure compared to those who had trailed the successful flight, said his son had talked to him by telephone after landing at Comillas, Spain.

"This was a wonderful flight," the elder Lotti said. "I couldn't believe they were safe until I finally talked to my son. We intend to care for the stowaway as if he were our own child. It must be fine for a kid to have such courage."

Stowaway Went on to Paris.

Old Orchard, Me., June 14.—(Special.)—A flip of a coin sent Arthur Schreiber into the great adventure that carried him across the Atlantic in a stowaway in the Yellow Bird, and tonight the friends who had looked on him with indifferent eyes as a fairly good entertainer at house parties were commenting enthusiastically on his escape.

Arthur Schreiber is 22 years old, of medium height, and slender. His accomplishments before he crept into the cabin of the Yellow Bird were confined to the study of the most modest of indoor tricks. He was a good dancer, and once in a while he would fill in at an amateur play, just a youth around town, who had losted, more or less, since he was graduated from Portland High school five years ago.

Last Wednesday night Frank H. Stevens, a Portland real estate broker, was driving to Old Orchard to see the two planes poised for the flight over the Atlantic. On the way to the beach he picked Schreiber up. They walked around both airplanes several times, discussing the new world record. Schreiber was wearing a flight helmet, dusty goggles, and leather puttees. He managed to smuggle them out of the house without attracting attention. His chum was waiting and they were lucky enough to get another lift out to the beach.

Late Wednesday night the two airplanes were dragged out of their hangar and fastened to the beach. In the light of the bonfire a coin was flipped. The youths stooped to look at it in the dark. Schreiber's face lit up. He gripped off his coat and began to climb into the flying suit. He hurriedly penciled a note to his family and his companion promised to deliver it at the venture should turn out successfully.

Scuttles Into Plane.

Most of the crowd at that time seemed to be near the Green Flash, so the conspirators decided they would have a better chance with the French plane. Young Cox had a few dollars in his pocket. He gave them to his friend and wished him good luck and walked to the cabin door of the big French monoplane.

Whether any one actually saw Schreiber, screened by a group of people scattered all about him, scuttles through the door of the Yellow Bird has not been definitely decided.

Shortly afterward Armand Lotti, financial backer of the flight, went into the cabin, but he came out again, apparently unaware of the stowaway's presence. Jean Assollant, too, looked in the door and saw nothing unusual. Then the Yellow Bird flew off with the stowaway undiscovered.

Father Calls Boy Hero.

Portland, Me., June 14.—(Special.)—Joy and anxiety are mingled tonight at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morris R. Schreiber, whose son, Arthur, is the stowaway.

STOWAWAY SAYS LINDY INSPIRED STOLEN SEA HOP

Flips Coin with Chum Tor Adventure.

COMILLAS, Spain, June 15.—(Saturday.)—[U.P.]—The glory of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh inspired the adventure of Arthur Schreiber, the 22-year-old American youth, who sneaked aboard the French monoplane Yellow Bird and flew in it from Old Orchard, Me., across the Atlantic ocean to Comillas, Spain.

Lindbergh is the greatest man I know about," said young Schreiber, who fooled aviation experts who did not believe it possible for a stowaway to be aboard the plane. "I wanted to do what Lindbergh did."

"I was unable to pilot a plane, so I decided to put myself inside one," Schreiber explained the friendly charge of Jean Assollant, chief pilot of the Yellow Bird, that he was responsible for the failure to reach Paris.

"Why did you do this?" he was asked. "Did you not think of the danger to the others, if not to yourself?"

Without hesitation he replied: "This meant glory for me. I was determined to do like Lindbergh and fly across the ocean."

Will Care for Schreiber.

PARIS, June 14.—(U.P.)—The parents of Armand Lotti, radio operator and backer of the Yellow Bird's trans-Atlantic flight, want to take care of the American boy who stowed away on the French monoplane "as if he were our own child."

The French hotel owner, whose son sponsored the successful flight, said his son had talked to him by telephone after landing at Comillas, Spain.

"This was a wonderful flight," the elder Lotti said. "I couldn't believe they were safe until I finally talked to my son. We intend to care for the stowaway as if he were our own child. It must be fine for a kid to have such courage."

Stowaway Went on to Paris.

Old Orchard, Me., June 14.—(Special.)—A flip of a coin sent Arthur Schreiber into the great adventure that carried him across the Atlantic in a stowaway in the Yellow Bird, and tonight the friends who had looked on him with indifferent eyes as a fairly good entertainer at house parties were commenting enthusiastically on his escape.

Arthur Schreiber is 22 years old, of medium height, and slender. His accomplishments before he crept into the cabin of the Yellow Bird were confined to the study of the most modest of indoor tricks. He was a good dancer, and once in a while he would fill in at an amateur play, just a youth around town, who had losted, more or less, since he was graduated from Portland High school five years ago.

Last Wednesday night Frank H. Stevens, a Portland real estate broker, was driving to Old Orchard to see the two planes poised for the flight over the Atlantic. On the way to the beach he picked Schreiber up. They walked around both airplanes several times, discussing the new world record. Schreiber was wearing a flight helmet, dusty goggles, and leather puttees. He managed to smuggle them out of the house without attracting attention. His chum was waiting and they were lucky enough to get another lift out to the beach.

Late Wednesday night the two airplanes were dragged out of their hangar and fastened to the beach. In the light of the bonfire a coin was flipped. The youths stooped to look at it in the dark. Schreiber's face lit up. He gripped off his coat and began to climb into the flying suit. He hurriedly penciled a note to his family and his companion promised to deliver it at the venture should turn out successfully.

Scuttles Into Plane.

Most of the crowd at that time seemed to be near the Green Flash, so the conspirators decided they would have a better chance with the French plane. Young Cox had a few dollars in his pocket. He gave them to his friend and wished him good luck and walked to the cabin door of the big French monoplane.

Whether any one actually saw Schreiber, screened by a group of people scattered all about him, scuttles through the door of the Yellow Bird has not been definitely decided.

Shortly afterward Armand Lotti, financial backer of the flight, went into the cabin, but he came out again, apparently unaware of the stowaway's presence. Jean Assollant, too, looked in the door and saw nothing unusual. Then the Yellow Bird flew off with the stowaway undiscovered.

Father Calls Boy Hero.

Portland, Me., June 14.—(Special.)—Joy and anxiety are mingled tonight at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morris R. Schreiber, whose son, Arthur, is the stowaway.

HOW FRENCH PLANE CROSSED ATLANTIC

Map showing the flight path of the Yellow Bird from Old Orchard, Maine, to Comillas, Spain, across the Atlantic Ocean. The map includes latitude and longitude markings, and labels for Canada, the Atlantic Ocean, and various cities including Paris, London, and Comillas.

French airplane, Yellow Bird, landed, first sight on the coast of Spain after a successful crossing of the Atlantic ocean. The top of the flight, flown on Chicago daylight saving time, was as follows:

June 13, 9:08 a. m.—Took off from Old Orchard Beach, Me., for Paris. 10:23 a. m.—Passed Matineus Rock light, on Maine coast.

5:45 p. m.—Reported by S. S. Wytheville about 350 miles at sea.

11:52 p. m.—S. S. American Farmer hears Yellow Bird communicating with Iberia Rochambeau and Laconia.

from Yellow Bird, saying "all well on board."

3 p. m.—Paris radio operator gets message from plane saying she is 500 miles off Oporto, Portugal, and would try for a landing in southern France if gas held out.

2:30 p. m.—Radio station at Bordeaux heard plane was flying north along Portuguese coast.

YELLOW BIRD'S JUMP OVER OCEAN SEVENTH WEST TO EAST FLIGHT

With the Yellow Bird's successful hop, seven nonstop flights have been made from west to east across the North Atlantic. The others were:

June 14, 1919—Capt. John Alcock and Sir Arthur W. Brown.

May 20, 1927—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

June 29, 1927—Commander R. E. Byrd, Bert Acosta, George O. Noville, and Bert Balchen.

Aug. 28, 1927—William Schlee and William Brock.

June 17, 1928—Amelia Earhart, Wilmer Stutz, and Louis Geron.

The first east to west flight was made by Capt. Eric Nelson and Lieut. Lowell Smith in the U. S. army's round the world plane. They flew from England to Iceland, thence to Greenland and from there to Labrador and New York.

The late Baron Guenther von Huenefeld, Capt. Herman Koehl, and Col. James Fitzmaurice flew from Ireland to Greenland island off the coast of Labrador last March.

landed near Comillas, Spain, late today, with the three French flyers aboard the Yellow Bird.

"My boy is a hero," shouted the father, who had relaxed after a sleepless vigil of 24 hours awaiting some word from the big plane and its occupants, bound from Old Orchard to Paris.

"Thank God, my boy is safe," said the mother, but for all she was relieved to learn that no harm had come to him and the trio whose involuntary guest he had been on the voyage, she still feels anxious for him and declared that she would be glad when he was home again and had his arms around her neck. Neither of the Schreibers have a wink of sleep since they received confirmation of the report that Arthur had gone on the Yellow Bird as a stowaway.

"He's like all boys," remarked the proud dad. "I know I myself, when a boy did things that gave my father and mother anxiety."

Swedish Flyers in Iceland Forced to Wait New Engine

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, June 14.—(U.P.)—The Swedish aviators tonight decided to remain here indefinitely until a special engineer arrives from Germany to go over the motors of their airplane. In spite of repairs made here by the crew and local mechanics, the motor troubles persist that ended three attempts to reach Greenland. It was thought that an engineer could arrive by June 23, bringing spare parts or a new motor.

TAKE BODY FROM LAKE

Several prominent Chicagoans visited the Jones undertaking room, 5830 Chicago Grove avenue, last night to view the body of an unidentified countryman, about 35 years old, found in the lake near the foot of 27th street. The body was clad in white shirt and dark trousers, and was of good quality.

AIRMAN'S BRIDE FINDS 13 LUCKY, KNEW HE'D WIN

Mme. Assollant Happy as Yellow Bird Lands.

New York, June 14.—(Special.)—"I knew my Jean would make it," smiled the blonde actress bride of four days when she received news that her aviator husband, Jean Assollant, had landed with the Yellow Bird at Santander, Spain.

"He really couldn't fail, you know—my hunch told me that. And then I love him, you see. And when you love a person like Jean you just know that nothing can go wrong," and Mme. Assollant blushed slightly, fingering her pearl necklace rather nervously at the admission.

She Believes in Thirteen.

Clasping "her Jean's" blue bordered handkerchief, a last token from her husband, seized in "those all too brief moments before he took off yesterday," Mme. Assollant confessed to her belief in the lucky hunch that had kept her confident all along.

"You see, there are thirteen letters in Jean's name and there were thirteen in mine—Pauline Parker. I was born in Winthrop, Me., a place with thirteen letters in its name. I married Jean thirteen days after I met him, and he took off on his flight on June 13. So, if there's anything in letter combinations, we just couldn't miss having luck."

Her immediate sailing for France to join her husband is planned by Mme. Assollant.

"We haven't any definite plans, of course, though we'll likely stop at the Hotel Lotté," she said. "I am definitely through with the stage and when I see Jean again it will be soon enough to make plans for our life together in France."

Navigator to Wed.

New York, June 14.—(Special.)—Rene Lefevre, 24 years old, navigator of the Yellow Bird, is flying not merely to Paris but to the altar. Just before the monoplane took off the news leaked out that the shy aviator was engaged.

The girl is Mile. Renee Balleguier, 19 years old, of Fournies, a small city in the north of France. Appropriately, she lives in the Villa Mon Reve (my dream). The engagement was entered into just before Lefevre left France for this country in April.

Mile. Balleguier and M. Lefevre have an understanding, based, of course, on the successful outcome of the flight, that their marriage take place soon after the monoplane lands in Paris.

WOMAN IS ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

While examining her husband's revolver last night Mrs. Georges Bernier, 37 years old, colored, 4338 Lanier avenue, accidentally discharged the weapon, the bullet wounding her in the left leg.

BABY ESCAPES UNHURT AS CAR CRUSHES BUGGY

Girl's Auto in Double Crash.

Miss Virginia Porter, 19 years old, 6445 Merrill avenue, daughter of William W. Porter, a broker with offices at 144 West Jackson boulevard, narrowly escaped death late last night when the automobile she was driving overturned in a collision with another car and then crushed a baby carriage.

Robert Purth, 3 years old, escaped with a slight injury.

Miss Porter was driving east on 61st street with Miss Florence Fallon, 13 years old, 8925 Fagton avenue, a private secretary. At Racine avenue she crashed into a car driven by Alexander Sinclair, 1050 West 79th street.

Miss Porter's car turned over, rolling onto the sidewalk and striking the baby carriage propelled by Mrs. Clara Purth, 5750 Aberdeen street. The child was flung from the carriage, suffering a cut on the head.

Miss Fallon was slightly injured. Parents of Miss Porter refused to discuss the accident.

Two Deaths in County.

Two deaths yesterday raised the 1929 Cook county auto toll to 243. The victims:

Steve Okmone, 50 years old, representative of Wolfheart Inc. of New York, a resident of the Palmer House. Killed when he drove his automobile into a street car at Clark and Addison streets.

He was identified by papers in his pocket.

Gilbert Williams, 49 years old, colored, 325 West Schiller street. Fatally injured when he was struck by an automobile driven by Joseph Abbotte, 1905 Russell street, in front of 2310 Lincoln street.

Family of Six Injured.

A family of six persons was injured, one possibly fatally, when the automobile in which the members were riding was overturned in a collision with a Yellow taxi cab at Kenney street and Forest avenue, Evanston, last night. All were taken to St. Francis' hospital, Evanston.

Bernard De Marco, 11 years old, suffered a possible skull fracture. His father, Nicola De Marco, 2043 Chestnut street, Wilmette; his mother, Mrs. Aurelia De Marco, and three sisters, Veronica, 9; Margaret, 16; and Mary, 12, were slightly injured.

The school children of Evanston have crossed street intersections approximately 5,000,000 times during the school year just closed with perfect safety under the direction of the Evanston Junior police department. It was disclosed yesterday by H. G. Sporer, president of the Evanston safety council.

Friends of the girl claimed that her failure to return home overnight, although they were very emphatic in denying that she had ever done so before. They failed to think of her absence until noon Friday, when a girl friend of Miss Hix called to confirm a dinner date during the afternoon. The girls then called the police.

Friends of the girl claimed that she never seen her in the company of men, nor had she ever before had a date to their knowledge.

COLLEGE GIRL MURDERED AND BODY MANGLED

Last Seen on Way to New Ambassador His Pipe to Columbus, O., June 14.—(Special.)—The terribly mutilated body of a woman was found on the rim of the New York Central railroad today. Tonight it was identified as that of Miss Theresa E. Hix, 44, old medical student at Ohio State University.

Miss Hix was last seen alive at a switchboard operator at the Columbus hospital about 8 o'clock last night. At that hour she left the hospital, saying that she had a date and would be back about 9 or 9:30. She never returned. She was the daughter of Melvin T. Hix of Columbus, Pa.

Two boys practicing on the range found the body.

The girl's head had been crushed 17 times by a sharp instrument. Her body was a mass of blood. She had been slashed five times. Her abdomen had been gnashed and torn.

Tags Ripped from Clothing.

Clothes had been ripped from the clothing while her coat, which she wore when she left her room, had been stolen. Her rings and watch had been taken. Her identification tag, which she wore on her wrist, had been torn from her wrist.

Early last evening Miss Hix was reported at University hospital in a condition in operating a telephone switchboard. She had applied for a position there during the day.

At about 8 o'clock Miss Hix was taken to the hospital. She was found dead at 12 o'clock.

Her roommates, Alice and Mary Huston, also co-eds, made the identification of the victim this morning. They said that they knew Miss Hix was expecting to obtain work at the hospital and felt no alarm when she failed to return home overnight, although they were very emphatic in denying that she had ever done so before. They failed to think of her absence until noon Friday, when a girl friend of Miss Hix called to confirm a dinner date during the afternoon. The girls then called the police.

ARREST, INDICT 7 IN DOCTORS' LICENSE FRAUD

Bare Operations of Ring

In a special session the Cook county grand jury yesterday returned conspiracy true bills against seven men, who, according to Chief Investigator Patrick T. Roche of the state's attorney's office, are leaders and confederates in a nation-wide ring engaged in selling physicians' and dentists' licenses. The indictments, returned before Judge Robert E. Gentzel, name men from Chicago, Springfield, St. Louis, and New York. All those indicted are under arrest, but Roche believes that only the surface of the conspiracy has been scratched.

One of the leaders in the alleged conspiracy, according to the state's attorney's office, is Harry Goldstein, alias Brovsky, 1704 Noble street, Springfield, known there as "The Senator." Goldstein was arrested in Springfield late yesterday by one of Roche's agents.

Trapped Issuing License.
He was trapped issuing a license at the request of Albert Barron, 4157 Clarendon avenue. Barron is called "Doc," and is a graduate of the Physicians and Surgeons School of St. Louis, an institution which has been under investigation at various times. Barron is believed to be the go-between in the conspiracy.

Before going to Springfield, Barron confessed, Roche said, and on the strength of his confession telegrams were sent and the following men arrested:

Dr. Marcus Kalmus, Marcy hotel, New York City, who is alleged to be the eastern representative of the ring; and Dr. Robert Lentine, 8029 O'Fallon street, St. Louis, said to be the western representative. Dr. Kalmus, who is reported to have a brother prominent in New York police, was arrested in Pittsburgh on his way home from Chicago. He said he would fight extradition.

Dr. Lentine in St. Louis declined to waive extradition, but said he would voluntarily come to Chicago soon to clear up the affair. He declared he was at a loss to account for his arrest.

Three Others Arrested.
L. Mitchell Blaine, 5045 Winthrop avenue, was arrested and found to possess an investigator's star of the state department of registration and education, which he said was given him by W. H. H. Miller, former head of that department, who was once indicted for issuing false medical licenses. The two others named in the indictments returned yesterday are Peter Marcia and Henry Grainger, both of Chicago, and alleged agents in the conspiracy. The indictments charge the seven men with bringing about the issuance of licenses in three cases, two for the sum of $2,000 each and the other for $1,000.

Although only three instances are named, Roche said he had evidence of seven other cases of license selling, and he believes that hundreds of licenses have been issued fraudulently. The name of Victor C. Michael, Springfield superintendent of the department of registration and education was brought into the investigation with the finding in Barron's possession of a blank letter form with the department letter head stamped on it.

To Whom It May Concern:
This is to certify that M. D. is a duly licensed physician in the state of Illinois of good standing, and is cheerfully recommended for reciprocity.

Obligatory yours,
"Victor C. Michael, Superintendent."
According to Barron, Roche said, the Michael signature is forged and the official seal used was given to him by Goldstein.

Licenses Sold for $3,000.
Roche said last night that the ring operated largely with men who had been unable to pass medical examinations in other states. They were brought here and given licenses for a sum, usually $3,000, and sent home with a "reciprocity" letter.

When Barron confessed, Roche forced him to telephone Goldstein at Springfield. The chief investigator listened on another wire and the following conversation, he said, took place:

BARRON—Hello, Senator, this is Barron. I've got a new customer for you.

GOLDSTEIN—What is he, an M. D. or a D. M.?

BARRON—An M. D.

GOLDSTEIN—I wanted to know so I could get things ready.

BARRON—Say, if any one comes from the east for a license, can we take care of him?

Talks of "Split" in Springfield.
GOLDSTEIN—It will take time, of course, but we'll take care of him. But don't forget there's a split here on the dough, too.

The split referred to, Roche said, may involve some state officials when the investigation has proceeded further. According to Roche, the ring may have had an inside man in the Springfield offices. The investigator said that a reputable physician, suspicious of the manner in which two men had obtained their credentials to practice medicine, found their names on the state license list, but a later investigation showed they had been traced.

Goldstein was brought to Chicago last night and was questioned by Roche and Assistant State's Attorney Charles Bellows. Goldstein after hours of drilling admitted nothing except that he identified a picture of Dr. Stollman of St. Louis as a man who had given him $1,500. He refused to say why he was given the money.

Report Murder Case
Witness Spirited Away
The search for James Gahagen, missing witness in the murder trial of Joseph Michaelson, a cab driver, was renewed yesterday after Assistant State's Attorney James M. Brown received information in a roundabout way that the witness had been spirited away from Chicago. Michaelson is charged with having murdered Bernard Kurtz, who was shot to death on the second floor of a building at 4440 Winthrop avenue.

NEW WRITS ADD TO LEGAL TANGLE OF DOG TRACKS

Swanson Uncertain About Making Arrests.

The dogs were chasing the electric rabbits last night at the three dog tracks in Cook county while State's Attorney John A. Swanson, and his assistants were pondering over whether the new temporary injunctions issued yesterday by Judge Harry M. Fisher in the Circuit court stopped them from making lawful arrests for betting on the races.

The new injunctions restrain State's Attorney Swanson, Chief Investigator Pat Roche, Lieut. William Blau, chief of the prosecutor's police, and Sheriff John E. Traeger from making "unlawful arrests" or unlawfully interfering with the operations of the tracks.

VERA McCORD.

Maurice Rothschild, said to be a wealthy Chicagoan, was sued for $250,000 breach of promise yesterday by Vera McCord, a New York actress and former motion picture producer. The broker, she charges, became her fiancé in September, 1928, but asked her several times to postpone the announcement until July 3, 1929. On that date she alleges, everybody concerned was present, except Mr. Rothschild.

According to the New York dispatches, Rothschild is a member of the executive committee of the Republic Motor Trucks corporation of Chicago, director of the American Canadian Products corporation of Bridgeport, Conn., and of the Stanley Automatic Products corporation of New York. His Chicago address was given as 1209 Astor street.

At that address last night employees said a Maurice Rothschild had occupied an apartment with his wife until last week when they moved to Highland Park for the summer.

In her suit, filed in the Supreme court, Miss McCord said Rothschild had been served with papers in the case on Jan. 25, and later submitted a general denial to her charges.

MRS. HOOVER'S TEA WITH MRS. DE PRIEST DRAWS TEXAS REBUKE

Austin, Tex., June 14.—[Special.]—The Texas senate today by a vote of 28 to 3 criticized Mrs. Hoover for entertaining Mrs. Oscar De Priest, wife of a Chicago congressman, at a White House tea. The discussion of the incident lasted several hours. Senators Thomas B. Love of Dallas and Julius Hyer of Fort Worth, the only two members who voted for Hoover for President, joined with their colleagues in deploring the incident. Love declared that in placing the Negro on social equality with her Mrs. Hoover endangered the white civilization and did real harm to the black race.

Miss Margie Neal, the only woman senator, said that Mrs. Hoover violated the most sacred social custom of the White House, a custom that had been lived up to since the days of Washington. Democrats of Texas and the south who voted for Hoover were severely criticized by some of the speakers.

Comment from Milwaukee.
Milwaukee, Wis., June 14.—[Special.]—"Here comes Texas back into the Democratic fold" is the title of an editorial in today's Milwaukee Journal, Democratic publication.

Beneath the title is the following: "Society note—Mrs. Oscar De Priest, wife of the Negro representative from Illinois, was entertained at tea Wednesday at the White House by Mrs. Hoover."

Youth Gets New Jail
Food—and for 6 Months
Michael Mallo, 17 years old, 818 Milton avenue, whose aversion to the food at the Chicago Avenue Police station led him to make three attempts on his life Thursday night, was granted a change of prison fate yesterday by Judge John H. Lyle in the Boys' court. He was sentenced to six months in the Bridewell and fined $200 on a charge of larceny.

Yarrow Leads Raid on Film in Labor Hall

The Rev. Phillip Yarrow, of the Illinois Vigilance association, led a squad of police last night in a raid on a labor hall at 119 South Throop street, where it was alleged, an improper film was being shown to 150 spectators under the auspices of the Art Metal Polers' union. Five arrests were made.

There are 145 seats in the national assembly.

INDIANA EDITORS ASK INQUIRY INTO CORRUPT LAKE COUNTY POLITICS

South Bend, Ind., June 14.—[Special.]—Newspapers here of both political faiths today joined in the Indiana press campaign for an investigation of the charges of corruption in the election last November in Lake county, Indiana's populous and growing up state industrial district.

It has been repeatedly alleged that floaters were brought from Chicago and elsewhere to vote at Lake elections, and when the federal grand jury reconvenes next Tuesday will, it is announced, investigate charges that the November vote, which gave big majorities to the Republican county, state and national tickets, was much greater than the normal increase in population. Sometimes the Lake county vote decides the state election, as it did in 1926 when United States Senator James E. Watson was re-elected.

POLICEWOMEN ASK MORE BE PUT ON FORCE

Are Not Given Real Chance, They Say.

A bigger and better force of policewomen, five times greater than the present inadequate force of thirty officers by the time the next Chicago World's Fair comes along was the cry which went forth from the Chicago Policewomen's association at a meeting last night in the Great Northern hotel.

The group, gathered in honor of Miss Helen Pigeon, Washington, D. C., secretary of the International Policewomen's association, named some definite grievances. Namely, that the national movement for policewomen started fifteen years ago has not done itself justice in Chicago, and that as they would the faces of friends they had not seen for years. They were familiar with the bright eyes of fever, the blue cheeks of pneumonia, the contracted brow and the flush of phthisis.

Makes Point with a Story.
"There is a story told of a case in Baltimore that puzzled a crew of young doctors there. The patient was stethoscoped and thermometered, and tests of all sorts made of him over a period of days, for the laboratory to decipher. Then one morning a practitioner of the old regime walked through the ward, glanced at this man and remarked, 'Well, I see you still have phthisis in Baltimore.'"

"This is the age of medical trust in the accuracy of mechanical devices," Dr. Lewis stated, at the same time citing the case of Sir James MacKenzie, famous for his discoveries about diseases of the heart. Sir James paved the way for the introduction of the electrocardiograph, a machine for counting heartbeats and measuring the pulse, but by the time it was introduced he was himself throwing away all such tools, having discovered that his own fingers were capable of as accurate reports.

"Patients," Dr. Lewis observed, "have developed an admiration for the complicated examination, and are demanding them; thus making the cost of medical service high. It would seem that they no longer recognize long experience by observation."

Need for More Strenuous.
"With the great World's Fair coming on, our force of thirty should not only be doubled, but increased five times," declared Mrs. Anna L. Smith, president of the association. "The railroad stations should be covered with policewomen, the parks, the bathing beaches, and every hotel in the loop."

There is no better deputy commissioner in all the country than John Stege, and I wish that other policemen could feel the same about the work of the policewomen."

Gives Other Cities.
Miss Pigeon pointed out the absurdity of thirty policewomen adequately handling a growing city the size of Chicago without a centralized bureau, a policewoman in every district, committed by a captain or lieutenant, or under the direct supervision of the chief of police. Such is done, she said, in Detroit, Cleveland, and others of the 235 cities and towns where policewomen are now indispensable departments of the police force.

Dr. Rachelle S. Yarros of the social hygiene council, which is supported by the Public Health Institute, declared that the Chicago force of policewomen is standing still and has been for the last ten years.

Among the Chicago patronesses of the policewomen movement are Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Mrs. Frank O. Lowden, Mrs. Chauncey Keep, Mrs. Harry Hart, Mrs. Fred W. Upham and Mrs. E. J. Buffington.

DOCTORS URGED TO GET BACK TO THE SICKBEDS

Art of Diagnosis Lost in Laboratory, Lewis Says.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.
"Come back to the clinic," was the advice, in brief, offered the medical profession yesterday by Dr. Dean Lewis, surgeon in chief at Johns Hopkins university at Baltimore and the chief speaker at a gathering of alumni of the Northwestern university medical school in the John B. Murphy Memorial, 40 East Erie street.

Dr. Irving S. Cutter, dean of the Northwestern school, in endorsing Dr. Lewis' talk, called it "one of the most important messages that has been delivered before any audience of medical men in recent times."

For Personal Diagnosis.
Diagnosis of disease by personal knowledge gained through bedside experience and watching the progress of a patient over a long period of time, as opposed to the laboratory method of making findings from X-ray plates, analyses, charts and diagrams, was the theme of Dr. Lewis' discussion. His point was that the younger generation of medical men apparently prefers permanent work in the laboratory to the actual practice of medicine.

"The old clinicians," he said, "knew, as it were, the faces of different diseases and could recognize them as easily as they would the faces of friends they had not seen for years. They were familiar with the bright eyes of fever, the blue cheeks of pneumonia, the contracted brow and the flush of phthisis."

Doesn't Yank Thrown Out.
A party of a dozen Americans clad in the regulation "barkskin" costumes were rudely thrown out when they failed to produce the proper credentials. One American girl was disgusted with what little costume she wore and was forced to dash through the middle of the street for half a block in search of a taxi after being thrown out.

At the last minute a truck full of riotous students drove up with a completely nude blonde sitting on the hood of the car. She was triumphantly carried into the hall, while the mobs in the streets cheered.

In the early hours of the morning the traditional parade of the weary unclad dancers took place through the dark streets of the fashionable Etouille district, while police held back the crowds. The cops permitted those who wished to plunge in the fountains on the Place de la Concorde for a sobering bath.

Supreme Court to Decide.
The first of these two procedures is the one used in taking disbarment cases before the Supreme court.

No names were made public, and, according to Edgar B. Tolman, chairman of the committee, it is unlikely that the full details of the committee's final report will be disclosed before the board of managers acts and the information is filed in the Supreme court. The committee will meet at least three times more before the investigation is concluded, Mr. Tolman said.

Havre de Grace, Md., June 14.—(Ap.)—A coroner's jury tonight held Mrs. Hattie Stone, 40 year old widow, for action of the September grand jury on a charge of murder in connection with the death of her 15 year old son, George, on June 4.

Evidence of poison were found in the viscera of George by Baltimore chemists. He was the fourth member of the Stone family to die under similar circumstances inside of three years. Authorities are considering the exhumation of the body of Edward Stone, the youth's father.

'T WAS A WILD AND CAREFREE NIGHT IN GAY OLD PAREE

Naked Students Stage
Orgy in Streets.

PARIS, June 14.—All previous records for public bacchanalian orgies here were smashed tonight when more than 1,000 art students and their girlfriends, after priming themselves generously with champagne, staged their annual frenzy known as the Quai's Arts ball.

The novel feature of this year's orgy was the fact that a goodly part of the spectacle was staged in the streets of Paris, while the embarrassed gendarmes looked on helplessly, instead of inside the heavily barricaded doors of Salle Wagram, where the affair was supposed to take place.

Revel on Boulevards.
Shortly after the dinner hour the participants, who apparently had confined themselves to a liquid meal, began appearing in Montmartre and on the main boulevards of the city in fantastic costumes. Although the "costumes" were supposed to represent the Minoan civilization of ancient Crete, in most cases they actually consisted of merely loin cloths and red paint.

The students put on exhibitions which, despite the chill night breezes, made the famous Police Bergeers show lack taste for the amount of bare flesh displayed. A number of the participants who were going in good form amused themselves and shocked the customers of the cafe by their agility in running across the terrace tables, tipping over cups of coffee and glasses of beer.

Shortly before midnight mobs of staggering art students began mobilizing before the doors of the Salle Wagram, where they were forced to give a series of passwords to the husky guards at the entrance before they were permitted to enter.

Doesn't Yank Thrown Out.
A party of a dozen Americans clad in the regulation "barkskin" costumes were rudely thrown out when they failed to produce the proper credentials. One American girl was disgusted with what little costume she wore and was forced to dash through the middle of the street for half a block in search of a taxi after being thrown out.

At the last minute a truck full of riotous students drove up with a completely nude blonde sitting on the hood of the car. She was triumphantly carried into the hall, while the mobs in the streets cheered.

In the early hours of the morning the traditional parade of the weary unclad dancers took place through the dark streets of the fashionable Etouille district, while police held back the crowds. The cops permitted those who wished to plunge in the fountains on the Place de la Concorde for a sobering bath.

Supreme Court to Decide.
The first of these two procedures is the one used in taking disbarment cases before the Supreme court.

No names were made public, and, according to Edgar B. Tolman, chairman of the committee, it is unlikely that the full details of the committee's final report will be disclosed before the board of managers acts and the information is filed in the Supreme court. The committee will meet at least three times more before the investigation is concluded, Mr. Tolman said.

Havre de Grace, Md., June 14.—(Ap.)—A coroner's jury tonight held Mrs. Hattie Stone, 40 year old widow, for action of the September grand jury on a charge of murder in connection with the death of her 15 year old son, George, on June 4.

Evidence of poison were found in the viscera of George by Baltimore chemists. He was the fourth member of the Stone family to die under similar circumstances inside of three years. Authorities are considering the exhumation of the body of Edward Stone, the youth's father.

LA GUARDIA LISTS
263 VICTIMS OF DRY FANATICISMWhitewash of Virkula
Slayer Raises Storm.

(Chicago Tribune From Service.)
Washington, D. C., June 14.—(Special.)—Increasing resentment against prohibition killings was evidenced in the house today as the treasury department whitewashed the customs agent killer of Henry Virkula, International Falls, Minn., confederate, chain while enjoying a peaceful motor trip with his wife and children.

Representative F. H. La Guardia (Rep., N. Y.) roused the anger of house drys with a hot denunciation of the "shoot to kill" dry enforcement policy. He listed the names of 263 known victims of hair trigger enforcement by federal, state, and county dry authorities.

Sees Civil War Threat.
Mr. La Guardia warned the house that unless the promiscuous slaughter of citizens in the name of Volsteadism is ended, the country may be plunged into civil war. Anti-Saloon league spokesmen sought to expunge his remarks from the record, but were prevented by the ruling of Representative Williams (Rep., Ill.), speaker pro tem.

All hope that the administration plans any immediate modification of its "hair trigger enforcement policy" was dashed by the treasury statement issued at the office of Assistant Secretary Seymour Lowman, chief of the government's dry enforcement activities. In this statement, prepared by Lowman and issued with the approval of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, it was asserted that the slayer of Virkula "has a perfect defense to the charges against him."

Ignores Absence of Liquor.
Although Lowman admitted White did not fire in self-defense, the treasury statement asserted that White "apparently was acting within his authority under the law." The fact that no liquor was found in Virkula's machine and that the dead man was in the car did not prevent the treasury department from rushing to his defense.

Lowman, as well as department of justice officials, frankly stated White's case will be transferred to the federal courts if he is indicted by the state.
The federal district attorney, either at St. Paul or Detroit, will defend White, it is said. Attorney General William D. Mitchell stated that under the law the case would have to be transferred to the federal courts. Although the law does not make it mandatory for the attorney general's office to defend White, the department will follow its custom and do so.

No Intention of Disarming.
The treasury report, which was based on a communication from Assistant Collector of Customs Lindbergh of Duluth, White's superior, concluded with the declaration that the department has no intention of disarming customs patrol men.

"Should congress pass a law disarming them it would, in effect, repeal the tariff laws," the statement said,
"because it is only through police power that the smuggling of merchandise into the United States can be prevented. The same rule holds good with reference to prohibition agents.
If prohibition agents are disarmed, it would, in effect, nullify the eighteenth amendment."

263 Victims in 37 States.
Mr. La Guardia declared it was his "painful duty" to supplement a list of 135 killings by federal dry agents submitted yesterday by Representative Florence P. Kahn (Rep., Cal.) with another showing the known victims of hair-trigger state and county enforcers as well as coast guardsmen.

Mr. La Guardia's tabulation which, he said, embraced only a fraction of the toll taken by local dry killers during nine years of Volsteadism, showed a total of 263 victims, including the 135 attributed to federal agents in 37 states as follows:

State—	By State Officers.	By Federal Officers.
Alabama	2	8
Arkansas	6	4
California	0	3
Colorado	0	1
Connecticut	1	0
Delaware	0	1
Florida	0	14
Georgia	10	6
Illinois	2	3
Indiana	4	1
Kentucky	3	20

The tabulation did not include the shooting of Henry Virkula, near International Falls, Minn., nor the killing of Archibald Ruggier at Detroit, Mich., by federal enforcers.

"It has gone far beyond a question of 'wet' or 'dry,'" declared Mr. La Guardia as he brandished "the grim table." "It is now a question of peace and tranquility within our own borders. Several sections of the country are in turmoil because of the excesses of prohibition enforcers; peaceful citizens are being murdered as they ride with their families.

"Sometimes, somewhere, the wrong person will be shot, and the people of that community will retaliate, and once the revolt begins, no one can say

Third Michigan Liquor Lifer's Case Is Before Supreme Court

Lansing, Mich., June 14.—(Special.)
—Another of Michigan's notorious "life for a pint" convictions is now before the Supreme court for review as the result of submission of briefs
in behalf of Chas. Trippe of Flint.
Trippe's appeal is the third one in behalf of a "liquor lifer." The high tribunal rendered an adverse decision in the case of Fred Palm, Lansing man who was the original "pint of gin lifer." And the case of Mrs. Etta Mae Miller, mother of 10 children, now is awaiting decision.

Trippe was sentenced to a life term in Marquette branch prison by Judge Fred W. Brennan of Genesee Circuit court. The same sentence meted out a few months earlier in the same court to Adolph Hotelling, Owosso doctor who mistreated and murdered a Mount Morris school girl.

In the brief submitted by counsel for Trippe, it is argued that his arrest on a liquor possession charge was illegally made, in that the police raided his home without a warrant.
The criminal code has now been amended so that the maximum term for four prohibition violations is 15 years imprisonment, but there are still four victims of the old law serving life sentences.

Criticism is heard now of the attitude of Gov. Fred W. Green toward the prohibition lifers. He was quoted as promising to extend clemency to these victims of the old law if the legislature agreed to his program for softening of the stringent statute's provisions. The lawmakers acquiesced, but the governor has made no move to free or shorten the terms of any of the four victims.

The governor's critics say that Michigan was given much unpleasant notoriety by the "life for a pint" act and that sufficient publicity has not been given to the modification of the law to dispel the impression throughout the country that the state is still sending hip flask toasters, home brewers, and other minor offenders to prison for life. This situation, it is feared, is reacting unfavorably toward Michigan as a mecca for tourists and resorters.

where it will end. Prohibition, I say, is not worth plunging this country into another civil war."

Drys, who had sat silent under the indictment of prohibition, threw the house into confusion when they shouted angry protests at the assertion that the "shoot to kill" policy is fostering rebellion and hatred toward the government.

"Why, Mr. Speaker," declared Mr.
La Guardia, "Uncle Sam, the United States government, was always con-

Fight Ragweed

Students of public schools will be asked to destroy ragweed pollen, according to an announcement of the Chicago Woman's club, in an effort to eliminate the weed which scientists claim causes ninety per cent of the cases of hay fever. Members of the club will visit the schools asking the aid of the students in the exterminating campaign. It has been estimated that 1,200 tons of the pollen will be distributed over the city during August by winds blowing across vacant lots where the weed thrives.

aided by the American people as something kind, something to love.
Now it has become something hated, something oppressive."
"We will not have such statements here," said Representative Frank Murphy (Rep., O.), one of the Anti-Saloon league's spokesmen in the house. "I demand that those words be taken down and expunged from the record."

Rape Vainly for Order.
"Stand by your guns," Representative J. C. Schaefer (Rep., Wis.), one of the wet bloc, shouted to La Guardia, while Representative T. S. Wil-lams (Rep., Ill.), presiding as speaker pro tempore, rapped vainly for order.

"In the opinion of the chair the language of the gentleman from New York does not transgress the rules of the house," Mr. Williams declared when quiet was restored.
"Can you say," continued Mr. La Guardia, addressing himself to Mr.
Murphy and pounding the desk with his fist, "that it is conducive to the respect of law and order and good government when a man is returning home with his wife and little children in his car on a lonely road and is shot in the back and killed in the presence of that wife and children?"

HOOVER SETS U. S.
SURPLUS FOR '29
AT 100 MILLIONSDebt Reduction May Run to 700 Millions.

(Chicago Tribune From Service.)
Washington, D. C., June 14.—(Special.)—President Hoover today predicted a treasury surplus for the fiscal year 1929, ending June 30, of between 100 and 110 million dollars. That the surplus may exceed 120 million dollars was indicated by treasury officials.

Debt reduction during the fiscal year will exceed $60 million dollars and may run close to 700 million dollars.
In the fiscal year 1928, most of which was not affected by tax reductions of the 1925 revenue act, the surplus was nearly 400 million dollars and the gross debt was reduced by $95 million dollars.

Had Feared a Deficit.
The president, in making known the surplus estimate recalled that in February, prior to the unexpectedly large income tax receipts of March, the treasury had figured that there might be a deficit for the fiscal year of $17,000,000. At the time of the transmittal of the budget to congress, in December, a surplus of $27,000,000 was forecast, but tax refunds and other items between December and February seemed more than likely to wipe it out.

The president attributed part of the surplus to the drive by the government departments to hold down expenditures. The major part of it was due, however, to the large excess of income tax receipts above the original treasury estimates. Abnormal stock speculation, resulting in huge profits for taxpayers, has been credited by treasury officials with responsibility for the increased tax revenue.

45 Millions to Railroads.
The anticipated surplus takes into account income tax receipts due tomorrow, the second of the quarterly payments greatly in excess of original estimates. In March the income taxes were something like $30,000,000 more than had been estimated. Tomorrow's payments may run as high as $50 million dollars, which would represent an increase of about $75,000,000 over the June payments a year ago.

The surplus estimate also is based on the expectation that about $45-000,000 will be paid to the railroads for back mail compensation under the terms of a recent Supreme court decision. If it were not for this payment the surplus would be well above 150 million dollars.

The estimate of debt reduction takes into account the anticipated payment of European nations tomorrow, under the terms of their debt funding agreements, of approximately $30,000-000.

Huge Financial Operations.
Tremendous financing operations aggregating upwards of one billion 700 million dollars will take place at the treasury tomorrow. This includes the anticipated income tax receipts amounting to $50 million dollars, 404 millions which will be received from the sale of a new issue of treasury certificates of indebtedness and $30,000,000 from the foreign governments. Also included are nearly $30 million dollars which must be paid out on maturing securities and 100 million dollars in interest on the public debt.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon announced today that the total amount of subscriptions for the new 5 1/2 per

Canadian Rum Runners Arm
for War on U. S. Dry Army

WINDSOR, Ont., June 14.—(Canadian Press.)—An early clash of serious proportions between United States coast guard officers and the Detroit river and Lake Erie rum runners is expected by Chief of Police Harry Tamm of Amherstburg, Ont.

"There'll be a big row on the river before long, it seems from present indications," he said today.
Amherstburg, recognized by the United States prohibition enforcement agents as temporary headquarters of the down river rum crews, is swarming with strangers from across the river, the chief added.

Most of Strangers Bootleggers.
Most of these men are identified in various capacities with the liquor industry, he said, although a few of them may be "under cover" men for the United States customs or coast guard services.

The chief suspects the rum crew lying in the Amherstburg and Sugar Island sector are armed or are arming with Lewis guns in readiness for the much heralded major offensive by the United States forces.

"And it's my opinion that these new arrivals will use the guns," the chief said, "that is, if they are bothered by the coast guard crews."
The runners have charged repeatedly they had been fired on without warning by the police river patrol, who did not give them an opportunity to halt for a search of their craft or for a surrender.

Chief Tamm has not even any boats, leaving Amherstburg with liquor cargo and guarded by machine gunners, as yet, but the operators naturally would keep their weapons out of sight while docked at a Canadian port or while cruising in Canadian waters, he said.

Court Marshal for Dry Act.
Detroit, Mich., June 14.—(Special.)
—The United States government's cent certificates of indebtedness, dated tomorrow and maturing March 15, 1930, was $1,118,862,000. The unusual interest rate, the highest in a number of years, was responsible for the large over subscription. The total amount of subscriptions allotted was $404, 212,000.

Subscriptions received from the Chicago federal reserve bank district, $11,815,500, while the total allotted to the district was $52,201,000. Subscriptions from the New York district were $346,164,000, with an allotment of $30,285,000.

ROBBER SEIZES
$20,000 LOOT AT
'BOUL MICH' SHOP

The recently opened Saks Fifth Avenue shop at 840 North Michigan avenue was robbed of $20,000 in cash and jewelry valued by the store at $15,000 shortly after closing time last night by a bandit who entered the store's office on the third floor as Miss Florence Geraldson, the cashier, was locking up the last of the day's receipts.

Miss Geraldson and George W. Gleason, the credit manager, were forced to open the safe by the bandit, who threatened them with an automatic pistol. Sweeping the loot into a brief case, he dashed down the stairs to the street, where he was joined by a companion. The two lost themselves in traffic before the alarm was given.

From a description furnished by Miss Geraldson, police of the Chicago avenue station believe the bandit, who was attired in canvas gloves and "sneakers," to be the same man, who, similarly dressed, has committed numerous holdups and burglaries in the Gold Coast district.

Enraged by "Clearing" of White.
The local leaders were enraged by a message Prosecutor Hurlbert received from the United States attorney's office in St. Paul. This read:

"The treasury department today cleared Customs Border Patrolman White of culpability in connection with the killing of Virkula. Mr. Lowman (Seymour Lowman, assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of prohibition enforcement) says that newspaper reports are highly colored. White apparently was acting within his authority of the law and has a perfect defense to the charges against him. If he is indicted in the local court a motion will be made for transfer to the United States court."

Hurlbert read this in the citizens' meeting. There were growls of rage.
"The newspaper accounts were not newspapers didn't go far enough in telling the truth."

WAR DEBT AGES HOME; NEW YORK RECEPTION FAILS

Young Dodges Scribes, but Issues 'Statement.'

BY TOM PETTEY.

New York, June 14.—(Special.)—The welcome to Owen D. Young and his companions expected to be a triumphal procession, but it was a far different thing. The man who helped the world to win the war would have none of the adulation the city wished to bestow on him.

In fact, nobody in New York, except a taxicab driver, saw Mr. Young. He came as furtively as a spy and became almost Lindberghian in his ability to escape the public and the press. Thomas W. Lamont and T. W. Perkins, the two other men on the reparations committee, also returned on the Aquitania, which docked at 9:40 o'clock tonight. That is, Mr. Perkins returned, but Mr. Lamont got off at quarantine with Mr. Young and came along to the pier via Park Avenue.

Mr. Lamont said Mr. Young was resting in his home at 330 Park Avenue and was taking a midnight train to Cleveland, where his son, Charles J. Young, is to be married tomorrow to Miss Ester Marie Christensen.

A tug took Mr. Young and Mr. Lamont off the Aquitania at quarantine this just as a revenue cutter unloaded a pack of reporters and camera men.

Young Does a Lindbergh. The tug was scheduled to proceed to Pier 54, where a large crowd had gathered to greet the reparations experts. But Mr. Young got word of the crowd, ordered the tug to dock at the Battery, stepped into a taxicab, and in two minutes was as completely lost as the $30,000,000 of reparations the United States waived claim to in Paris.

Mr. Lamont, having been dubbed "official spokesman" by J. P. Morgan, another reparations ace, when the financier returned home a week ago, decided to return to Pier 54 and make his apologies to the crowd which had been waiting patiently since 6 o'clock. But as for discussing the settlement of the war debt, the new world bank or anything else concerning the commission, he was "shush, shush."

In Hurry to Get Home. "Why did you and Mr. Young get off at the Battery when you radioed you were coming here?" Mr. Lamont was asked.

"Mr. Young was in a hurry to get home," he explained, "and we decided it would be quicker. We just changed our mind. That is all."

"Will you tell us about the debt settlement?"

"Sorry, but I can't say a word. In fact, we have decided not to discuss it until we have made an informal report to Washington, which will be done within a week or so."

"Does that include advice on the war bank?"

"It certainly does. I believe, however, Mr. Young left a statement with his secretary about the Aquitania."

Who Settled the Debt? Mr. Lamont suddenly found himself alone. There was a rush for the statement. Here it is in part:

"Mr. J. P. Morgan brought to the work of the committee his great prestige and his character, which in themselves were invaluable. His work on the plan for the bank perhaps made possible the adoption of that feature of the plan."

Mr. Thomas W. Lamont, by his special knowledge of the problems, cleared away misunderstandings and misapprehensions.

Mr. Thomas Nelson Perkins was not in name only the alternate chairman. He was so in fact. He should share in the credit, a too large part of which will inevitably be given to me."

Changeable Occasion. Everything that concerned the arrival of the reparations delegates this evening was as changeable as the weather. It rained twice. Mr. Young changed his mind twice. Mr. Lamont changed his three times. Mr. Perkins had his already made up.

Nobody had anything to say about the most interesting and possibly the most important multi-national agreement since the peace pact that ended the war.

If the public wants to know anything about the reparations agreement at present it will have to read the editorial pages or go back and dig up the text.

FRANCE BALKS AT YOUNG PLAN; U. S. DEBT PUT FIRST

Reparations to Wait, Poincare Declares.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.) PARIS, June 14.—France has no intention of officially considering the Young plan for settlement of German reparations until the American and English debt accords are ratified, it is learned today. Should Premier Poincare not succeed in securing ratification of these accords, the seventeen weeks' work of the international finance experts to settle the reparations problem will be for naught, as far as France is concerned.

Premier Poincare, discussing the question in the corridors of the chamber today, said every effort would be made to secure ratification of the debt accords before July 31. As for the Young plan, he said, there was no hurry since it had not yet been approved by the other countries and could not logically come up before the debt question is definitely settled.

Problems Hand in Hand. Other observers point out that approval of the Young plan rests entirely on the debt ratification, because the experts' calculations of the reparations figures coincided exactly with the sums the allies are engaged to pay to Washington.

Therefore, according to the French viewpoint, the debt ratification and the Young plan go hand in hand, just the same as the German reparations payments and allied debt payments are interdependent.

When the debt ratification discussion comes up in the chamber on June 25, Premier Poincare is resolved to let the deputies choose whether they prefer ratification by decree or by other means.

Important Announcement Wednesday. He also said today that he intends to make important declarations next Wednesday, based on the "cardinal documents" before the chamber finance commission and the foreign affairs commission. The premier estimated that it would take him at least three days to get the contents of these documents off his chest.

Confident of securing ratification of the debts, however, Premier Poincare intends calling back the chamber and senate from their vacations in the latter half of August to approve the Young plan.

Belgian Marks Parley Opens. (Chicago Tribune Press Service.) BRUSSELS, June 14.—The Belgian-German negotiations on Belgium's claim for compensation for the millions of paper marks unloaded by Germany during the wartime occupation were opened here this morning upon the arrival of Dr. Ritter, the German delegate, after calling upon Foreign Minister Paul Hymans. Dr. Ritter was closeted four hours with Camille Gutt, the Belgian delegate.

In place of the Belgian demand for about $5,000,000 annually over a period of 27 years, Dr. Ritter is reported to have offered a similar sum over a period of ten years.

'Mender of Broken Homes' Wins Leniency from Judge

It by Oct. 31 Miss Mary Conrad has not attempted to resume her career as first aid to wobbly matrimonial happiness. Judge Philip Finnegan promised yesterday, he will dismiss charges pending against her of possessing and distributing obscene literature. Miss Conrad's agency in the Midway Bank building at 307 West Madison street purported to solve the problems of maintaining domestic tranquility for a charge of $10. She professed that her methods are no more obscene than nature itself.

(S. D.) would have voted in the negative if they had been present.

The Democrats opposing the report were Cole Blease (S. C.), T. H. Cavanaugh (Ark.), Royal S. Copeland (N. Y.), David I. Walsh (Mass.) and Burton K. Wheeler (Mont.).

Brookhart Lines Up. Senators from central states voting for the report included Charles S. Deneen and Otis F. Glenn (Rep., Ill.), James Couzens and A. H. Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.), James E. Watson and Arthur Robinson (Rep., Ind.), S. W. Brookhart (Rep., Ia.), and Daniel Steiwer (Dem., Ia.).

Senator J. T. Robinson (Dem., Ark.), minority leader, insisted that the bill failed to fulfill Republican campaign pledges and predicted that the tariff bill when enacted will injure rather than aid the farmer.

Action on the resolution of Senator William E. Borah (Rep., Idaho) to instruct the finance committee to confine tariff revision to agricultural commodities was deferred until Monday.

The Borah resolution figured in today's debate. It was indicated that it would be pretty generally supported by the Democrats and by a number of Republicans from agricultural states.

Senator Wesley L. Jones (Rep., Wash.) offered an amendment to the Borah resolution providing that the tariff revision shall deal with agriculture and other lines of production that have been in a depressed condition for the last year or more, traceable to steadily increasing imports.

Continued Tariff Hearings. Hearings on tariff revision were in progress during the day before subcommittees of the finance committee. Dairy interests appeared in behalf of an increase in the duty on casin from 3 1/2 to 8 cents per pound. Paper manufacturers, who use casin in coating paper, opposed any increase. The bill, as passed by the house, retains the 3 1/2 cent rate of the present law.

The National Grange issued a statement asserting that while there have been some substantial increases in rates on agricultural products in the house bill, the relative disadvantage of agriculture will be as great as before, because of the general upward revision of rates on industrial products.

Albert Asks Inquiry on Ettelson's Office.

deny your constituents the right to have an investigation."

That statement struck a responsive chord in Ald. Albert. "I have no sinister motive in this resolution," he said. "I want to cooperate with the mayor to help him in the few remaining weeks of his administration which is facing a critical situation."

Eaton Backs Resolution. Ald. Charles S. Eaton (9th) then came to Albert's aid.

"This is a matter of public policy," said Eaton, "and the council should suspend its rules to consider it. It calls merely for the appointment of a committee and I think the council would make a mistake in going on record against that."

The motion to suspend the rules prevailed, and Ald. Nelson declaring on the roll call: "There is no emergency in this matter to make it of such importance as to require a suspension of the rules. There is no need for federal investigation of this revelation until there are grounds for that investigation, and so grounds have been produced here. And if there is a basis the investigation should start at home and not by the senator from Nebraska. Why didn't he consult with the senators from Illinois?"

Breen Gets in His Work. The meeting recessed, and in that period of respite the stage was set for the defeat of Ald. Albert by Mr. Breen, Corporation Counsel Samuel A. Ettelson's chief assistant.

"The paragraph naming Insull is an imputation of guilt," declared Ald. Maasen, as the council reconvened, "and I move to amend by striking that out." Ald. Albert stated that he had no objection to the amendment, and on that fact the administration aldermen based their plea that new matter had been interjected and the suspension of rules was lost.

The argument around that point brought Ald. Louis B. Anderson (2d), a floor leader of Thompson in other days, to a position directly in front of the rostrum on which sat the mayor, chewing a cigar, as he listened attentively. There was a pause as Anderson drew back his clenched fist to strike the palm of his other hand to give emphasis to his exposition of parliamentary procedure. The loud explosion of the firecracker halted his argument and threw the council and galleries into laughter.

"Insull gave $100,000 to the chairman of the firecracker commission which is a violation of the state and federal laws," said Ald. Albert during the debate. "The corporation counsel was a member—and maybe is now, for all I know—of the law firm that is still representing Samuel Insull. I know the dilatory tactics which have been employed here to defeat passage of the resolution. The council recessed for an hour and one-half while Jim Breen lobbied among the aldermen. Jim Breen, an official paid by the public to protect their interests, working against the people—I'll stop that."

When the resolution was referred to the committee on rules to determine whether it should eventually go to the judiciary or transit committee, Ald. Albert said:

"I was thrown out of this council because I wouldn't go along with the administration, but I am back. I will go to Swenson and ask if he will carry out his election campaign pledges to wipe out corruption. Then looking at the mayor, he exclaimed: 'Your helpers betray you worse than Brutus betrayed Caesar.'"

FRENCH PLANES RAIN BOMBS ON MOORISH REBELS

Land Supplies to Cornered
Outpost of 360.

EL BORDJ, Morocco, June 14.—(AP)—Two thousand mountain Moors are still firing spasmodically in a guerrilla warfare, but airplanes have succeeded today in clearing the immediate vicinity of the French outpost of Alt-Yakoub, in which 360 men are quartered. They are reported to be equipped with plenty of food, water, and ammunition.

The tribesmen who a few days ago killed 13 members of the Foreign Legion, wounded many and took 79 into captivity, holding them prisoners in the Atlas mountains, have been reinforced by many other natives.

Airplane lands for 5 minutes. A French airplane today succeeded in landing on the desert sands alongside the besieged outpost for a brief five minutes while other French planes laid down a protecting curtain of bombs and machine gun bullets. The plane carried food and ammunition sufficient to supply reserves when they reach the spot.

When the pilot of the plane took off again from the hard sand he carried from the commander of the post a detailed report addressed to Paul Painlevé, French war minister.

Fresh Troops Arrive. Reinforcements have arrived here at El Bordj for the Alt-Yakoub outpost and are preparing for military operations which are expected to free completely not only the besieged group at Alt-Yakoub but other French outposts in the vicinity.

From detailed reports of survivors of the ambush near El Bordj, here today, it appears that the ambush was successful because the marching column failed to maintain contact with its advance and flank guards. These last began when surrounded by superior forces of the rebels. Not noticing the disappearance of the outposts, the main column continued to march and walked into the rebel's trap.

When attacked, the column was under orders to repair telephone lines which the rebels had cut between Alt-Yakoub and El Bordj.

Cabinet to Discuss Crisis. PARIS, June 14.—(U. P.)—A special meeting of the French cabinet has been called to discuss the situation and several members of the chamber of deputies announced their intention of interpreting the government about its handling of the Moroccan situation.

Nightly Arab Pledges Loyalty. MADRABEKCH, Morocco, June 14.—(U. P.)—While French airplanes continued to rain destruction upon the rebels and other airplanes dropped ammunition in parachutes to besieged groups of the foreign legion in the sand wall outpost of Alt-Yakoub, Gov. Gen. Lucien Saint informed France today that he had succeeded in receiving the pledge of loyalty to France of the mighty Glaoui, the pasha of Marrakech and overlord of the Atlas mountains.

The renewal of Pasha Glaoui's pledge is worth more than thousands of troops. He really is one of the most powerful men in the world, holding authority of life and death over his 1,000,000 Moor subjects. Nearly a million rifles are ready to take sides either way he chooses without question.

MYSTERY GIRL

Young woman, supposed to be a Chicagoan, who collapsed at Tulsa, Okla., a week ago, and to whose identity no clew has been found except the name "Mrs. S. J. Lassaline" found in a handbag.

DOUBT MISSING GIRL IS THE ONE HELD IN TULSA

While the police at Tulsa, Okla., were reported as convinced last night that a mentally distracted girl they picked up a week ago is Miss Violet Brosseau, 21 years old, who vanished May 5 from her apartment at 1359 Artye street, Miss Brosseau's mother, Mrs. G. W. Haskins, was in doubt of the identification last night.

Comparing her daughter's photograph with the picture of the girl in Tulsa, Mrs. Haskins was almost positive the two were not the same girl. When it was suggested that a week's confinement in the Tulsa jail on a prisoner's fare might alter her daughter's appearance, Mrs. Haskins admitted a resemblance between the two photographs.

The mother inquired the railroad fare to Tulsa, but finally decided the chance of the girl being her daughter was too remote to justify the trip.

AMERICAN DIES OF OXYGEN NEED ON GIANT INDIAN PEAK

CALCUTTA, India, June 14.—(AP)—A farmer, an employee of the Standard Oil Company of New York, was killed while attempting to reach the summit of Mount Kinabalu, a peak in the Himalayas, 27,315 feet high, one of the highest in the world. His death was only definitely ascertained today. Mr. Farmer, 40, of India, left part of his passage on a cargo boat. He started on the expedition on April 27 from Darjeeling in Bengal, accompanied by ten coolies who had received training with the Everest expedition. He made his fourth camp with them at an altitude of 22,000 feet and went on alone to a height where oxygen is needed, but he had none. His followers saw him make a fifth camp in a snow cave, where he slept despite the danger of falling in. The next morning they saw him climb to an altitude of 25,000 feet and suddenly disappear over a ridge. They waited four days for his return and then returned to Darjeeling.

Mr. Farmer, who was 24, did not make his trip under the auspices of a Himalayan club or any other responsible organization. His mother lives in Florida and his wife in New York.

VATICAN ENVOY SEES PERIL FOR PEACE IN MEXICO

Scores Fake Stories of Church Parleys.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
MEXICO CITY, June 14.—Mgr. Leopoldo Ruiz y Flores, archbishop of Michoacan and Vatican envoy, in an open statement this afternoon scored the sensational press which has been publishing purported forecasts of the results of the conference now progressing toward a solution of the tangle between the Roman Catholic church and the Mexican government.

The papal envoy said: "Regarding statements printed in the press pending between the apostolic delegate and the president of the republic, I deem it necessary to state that the information given out regarding matters supposed to have been discussed in the conference is entirely untrue and that there was present at the discussions on behalf of the church no other person than myself and Bishop Diaz. Nothing should be accepted as authentic unless issued over the signature of the accredited representative of the Mexican government or the apostolic delegate."

First Faked Pictures. One morning newspaper of radical tendencies published a faked picture representing President Emilio Portes Gil, Archbishop Ruiz y Flores, and Bishop Pascual Diaz of Toluca standing together, apparently holding an amicable conversation. Another published picture of both prelates in full church regalia, the captions stating that the pictures had been taken at the residence of the ecclesiastics yesterday. The latter pictures are said to have been taken in the United States.

No meeting of the prelates and president were held today. All meetings in the future will be at the request of one or the other of the parties to the negotiations. This allows all the parties time to discuss fully the points of controversy which have been presented at the last meeting of the conference.

Stories Aid Unreconcilables. The fabricated stories, it is said, have given the belligerent party within the church an opportunity to offer strong opposition to the negotiations with the government for settlement of the Roman Catholic question.

It was also said that the linking of the name of Bishop Guizar y Flores, of Chihuahua, who has just returned from Rome, with the negotiations, as was done by newspapers this morning, was "also unwarranted as the bishop has had nothing whatever to do with them and it is not intended by the church or the government that he shall have." One newspaper has alleged that certain bishops who have been active in their opposition to the government in the past would be compelled to leave Mexico.

Woodhall won a suit for $450 brought against him by his former landlady, Mrs. Celia Laffey, 6166 Oglesby avenue, in Small Claims court yesterday when Judge Max Lester ruled that the terms of a lease were not kept by Mrs. Laffey, who failed to furnish her tenant with heat and hot water.

INDIANIANS FETE MCUTCHEONS IN JUNGLE SETTING

Cartoonist Tells of

The scene was a clearing in the coastal jungle of a South American port. Under the tall tree ferns and palms which swayed in the gentle breeze from the moonlit bay in front of the forest, a company of 200 distinguished Chicagoans and members of the Indiana society were dining from select Spanish dishes, listening to Spanish music, while natives from the Brazilian forest, red nashes around their waists, moved about attending to their wants.

The guests of honor, sitting apart under a thatched roof, open to the sea and the mysterious gloom of the forest, were Mr. and Mrs. John T. McCutcheon, who have returned recently from an adventurous South American tour, and were thus taken back to the scenes of their travel. George T. Buckingham, president of the Indiana society, was the toastmaster and the magician who conjured up from the deep woods such figures as J. Ragland Patchmore, and other McCutcheon creations who came to listen to the strange tales which he brought back from the southern mountains and seas.

Entire Hall a Forest Scene. The entire banquet hall was done in this forest style, with a bay in front, and hills that reminded the travelers of the views from Rio de Janeiro's famous sea shore drive. But the atmosphere which had been created was rural, not the smart cosmopolitanism of Brazil's capital, something out of an O. Henry story, or one of John Massfield's South American interiors.

Mr. and Mrs. McCutcheon were captured upon arrival at the fourth floor of the Palmer House, where all this elaborate background had been constructed, and were brought into the banquet hall in great state, the cartoonist riding on a live donkey, the kind that took him over the Brazilian trails, and Mrs. McCutcheon carried by four black slaves in a litter chair.

The illusion of the night was sufficiently strong to make Mr. Patchmore an incongruous figure as he wandered about the banquet room talking about his vacation plans and seeking leaves of bread for an exploration trip along the Amazon.

John T. Helps with Menu. Mr. McCutcheon aided in the preparation for the affair by suggesting the menu to Walter L. Gregory, including such dishes as Langostinos, Montevideo, aceitunas, pepinos, Sopa de Sustancia, Baladron de Cayenne, Arroz con Pollo a la Criolla, Ensalada de Tomate y Lechuga, Condimento Peruano, Pasta al Guiso, Jodina del Cielo, Pastesles Especiales, café solo, etc. The native wines, found in all South American menus, were necessarily absent.

The last public dinner attended by Mr. and Mrs. McCutcheon was one given to them by the American colony at Iquitos, where roast peccary was the chief dish. They crossed the continent from Lima, Peru, to Para, Brazil, in twenty-one days. A trip which ordinarily takes fourteen days by mules was made in two and a half hours by airplane. They saw the jungles from the air and from the waters of the Amazon, where they journeyed 2,500 miles. Mr. McCutcheon exhibited motion pictures of parts of his trip to the guests last night.

SEAWAY DEFICIT NOW $3,935,000, STATE TELLS U. S.

Gives Detailed Statement of Cost, Progress.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

At the request of the federal government, an authorized fiscal statement of the Illinois waterway was delivered yesterday to Col. W. C. Weeks, U. S. engineer in charge. It was prepared by Superintendent of Waterways William H. McArthur and the State Engineer Major L. D. Cornish and was recently revised and compiled in government form. It shows as of May 1:

Expenditures to date $10,700,000
Necessary to complete $13,775,000
Total estimated cost $24,475,000
Funds from waterway $20,540,000

Deficit, without water power development $3,935,000

If water power is provided for, as was originally intended, perhaps $5,000,000 or $10,000,000 more would be added to the estimated cost. The uncertainty of the amount of water diversion from Lake Michigan is said to have been responsible for no more work on water power than the making of the dams and locks of such a character that they may become part of a water power development with a minimum of added expenses. Consequently there is no official estimate of water power cost.

Delay Seen Boosting Cost.

It has been repeatedly asserted that the cost would have been lower had the Illinois waterway channel between Lockport and Union been started when the constitutional amendment was adopted in 1908, instead of in 1913. Gov. Emmerson has appealed to President Hoover to take over this link of the waterway and operate and maintain it. It is said that the governor told the President that $5,000,000 will complete the project.

For the purpose of checking this estimate, as well as for obtaining a basis for judgment, the federal government submitted a questionnaire to the state making 367 specific inquiries regarding estimated costs, expenditures already made and the amount of work completed on each project.

The federal government's attitude will probably be determined upon this data, coupled with an engineering investigation by war department representatives. Under the constitutional amendment Illinois can appropriate only $20,000,000 for the waterway while the estimated cost is $24,475,000. The government questionnaire presents a vivid picture of each project, both in expenditures and results accomplished.

Answers Given Government.

The following table, compiled from answers to the government questionnaire, shows the amount expended in each project, its total estimated cost and the percentage of work completed:

Project	Spent	Total cost, per cent.
Lockport lock	$1,250,000	$1,250,000 100
Can. to Union	900,000	2,815,000 31.9
Random roads	1,160,000	3,264,000 35.5
Can. to Union	50,000	171,200 34.0
Random roads	180,000	2,851,000 6.3
Can. to Union	100,100	720,300 13.8
Random roads	11,000	450,000 2.4
Can. to Union	130,000	651,000 20.0
Random roads	1,500,000	3,772,000 39.7
Can. to Union	570,000	300,000 92.0
Random roads	2,300,000	3,800,000 60.5
Can. to Union	250,000	3,544,000 7.1
Random roads	1,200,000	3,400,000 35.3
Can. to Union	None	200,000 0.0
Random roads	None	261,200 0.0
Total	$10,700,000	$24,475,000

The bridge item of $3,544,000 may be revised. The war department in its general approval of the waterway plan gave its O. K. to proposed bridges with a smaller clearance than would be required for Mississippi river barges. Now the specific plans for bridges are being considered in Washington. The bridges involved in the above estimate together with estimated cost are as follows:

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Washington, D. C., June 14.—(Special.)—Proponents of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence seaway and the so-called all-American canal route through New York clashed in the house today when Representative Hamilton Fish Jr. (Rep., N. Y.) undertook to chide the farmers of the central and northwest for having "swallowed the propaganda put out by the St. Lawrence river advocates."

"Would you say that President Hoover, who favors the St. Lawrence route, has swallowed propaganda?" demanded Representative J. C. Schaefer (Rep., Wis.). "How can the route be 'feasible and could be built' if it were not for Canadian opposition?" he declared engineering and other difficulties in its construction rendered it less desirable than "the all-American route, a natural waterway now waiting to be developed."

"What do you mean, natural waterway?" interrupted Representative G. J. Schneider (Rep., Wis.). "How can you call a route that will be basically a canal a natural waterway?"

"And what about the facts that boats on the all-American would have to go under from 30 to 100 bridges?" demanded Representative G. M. Hudson (Rep., Mich.).

"A boat wouldn't be bothered any more by 80 bridges than it would by one," asserted Mr. Fish.

Some of these items, it was pointed out, may mislead the reader, as the Rock Island bridge total cost represents already made and the amount of work completed on each project.

The federal government's attitude will probably be determined upon this data, coupled with an engineering investigation by war department representatives. Under the constitutional amendment Illinois can appropriate only $20,000,000 for the waterway while the estimated cost is $24,475,000. The government questionnaire presents a vivid picture of each project, both in expenditures and results accomplished.

EDITOR BURNS LOSES HIS FIGHT ON EXTRADITION

Robert Elliott Burns, escaped Georgia chain gang convict, has lost his fight against extradition. Gov. Louis L. Emmerson yesterday honored a requisition from the governor of Georgia for the return to Atlanta of the Chicago magazine editor who was jailed for participation in a petty robbery, escaped, and lived for seven successful years in this city under his own name. He accused his wife of having informed Georgia authorities where he could be found.

The exposed of Burns, a veteran of the world war, as a former convict was brought about when his wife allegedly became jealous of another woman, Miss Lillian Salo, to whom her husband had transferred his affections and with whom he had been living in a north side apartment hotel. Burns related with the charge that his wife had forced him into marriage with her on discovering his past as a price of her silence. Many friends of the editor, especially real estate men, interested themselves in his behalf, but to no purpose.

GUilty of CON Game; Jailed.
Found guilty of operating a confidence game, William Burns, 19 Diversey st., Detroit, was yesterday sentenced to four months in the House of Correction by Judge John H. Lewis in the 20th court.

Title Changing Stirs Interest of London Author

Swinnerton Discusses Recent Examples.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—(Special Correspondent.)—I see that Mr. Knopf has changed the title of Charles Morgan's novel, "First Love," to "Portrait in a Mirror." The latter is the English title, but the book was originally called "First Love" here—before publication. This is the first instance I have ever known of a book being actually published under one title and then having its title altered.

No doubt the greater success of this particular novel in England than in America, as well as the unfortunate clash of title with Miss Delaford's "First Love," has been responsible. But, strangely enough, something similar has just occurred in London, in connection with a play. This play, greatly praised, was first given under the title "These Few Ashes." That was not a very attractive title, as it apparently led many people to think that the play was about cremation; and so the title has been altered to "Ladies, Please!" Whether this will be more successful I cannot say. It does not seem an absolute inspiration.

Miss Ethel Colburn Mayne is to write the first "life" of Lady Byron, and for the purpose of this work she has been supplied by Mary, Countess of Lovelace, with many documents of great importance, some of which never before have been published, even in the much debated "Antarctica." Nobody could make better use of this material than Miss Mayne, whose biography of Byron is a work of real scholarship. But then Miss Mayne is a very remarkable person. She is Irish, and I should judge, from her remorseless novel, "Gold Lace," lived as a child in an Irish garrison town.

Her short stories are very well known here as the nearest thing to Henry James' short stories. So is a delightful hostess, and a delightful talker; and, besides writing with great distinction herself, as novelist, critic (if I may adapt a word to indicate the writer of short stories), and biographer, she translates excellently from the German. It was she, I believe, who translated Ludwig's "Goethe," and I remember with satisfaction her translation of a German novel, "Gold Lace," which she translated excellently from the German. It was she, I believe, who translated Ludwig's "Goethe," and I remember with satisfaction her translation of a German novel, "Gold Lace," which she translated excellently from the German.

As I am speaking of translations, I should like to praise the translation which Mr. and Mrs. Muir have made of Ludwig Epp's brief book, "War." This short work, which is on the point of appearing, is one of the really authentic books about the war. The author speaks throughout in his own person, and he describes with the greatest simplicity his own experiences in the war. The truthfulness of the descriptions gives them extraordinary effect.

an hourly record of his sensations, and had now reproduced this record with minor cuts. But that does not mean that the book is minutely dull. It is anything but dull, just as it is as far as possible from sensationalism. In its brief way, free of trappings and the heavy over emphasis of other books of war experience, it supplies a very striking picture. For veracity I should say that there has been nothing and will be nothing to beat it. It does not challenge comparison with "Sergeant Gristle," but for those who desire an account of actual fighting it could hardly be bettered.

Melville E. Stone Award Goes to Detroit Youth

New York, June 14.—The Melville E. Stone award for the best work during the school year with the Newman News, student publication of the Newman school at Lakewood, N. J., has been given Charles Stevenson of Detroit; the award is presented annually and consists of fifty dollars in gold.

The prize was established several years ago by Walter Fahy of New York, formerly with the Associated Press, for which the late Melville E. Stone was general manager and counselor for many years.

One evening when he entered a meeting in the basement of a flat building he overheard the remark, "Where is the professor?" The question was told he had just come in, but still the man was unconvinced.

Merriam Tells How Chicago Politics Work

U. of C. Scientist Depicts
His Practical Contacts.

"Chicago," by Charles Edward Merriam. (Macmillan).

Mr. Merriam, a resident of Chicago for some twenty-eight years, professor of political science at the University of Chicago, for six years an alderman, and for many years both a participant and observer in many political scenes, has written a most interesting account of the growth of the city from the fire of 1871 to 1923.

What he has to tell is related not only with clarity, broad perspective, tolerance, and understanding, but with a delightful sense of humor that enables the author to poke fun at himself, as well as at some of the more spectacular of the city fathers. It seems the fact that he was a professor was an obstacle to Mr. Merriam when he ran for alderman. There were no particular issues in this campaign, so his opponents derided him because he was a highbrow.

One evening when he entered a meeting in the basement of a flat building he overheard the remark, "Where is the professor?" The question was told he had just come in, but still the man was unconvinced.

John Erskine
Has New One;
It's 'Uncle Sam'

Why Moral Movies Scorn
'Sir Galahad'!

BY FANNY BUTCHER.
PARIS.—The last few days have been a series of impressions and conversations about books and the people who make them. There was a delightful hour or so with John Erskine, who has just gone back to America.

He has finished a novel called "Uncle Sam," which sounds extremely amusing. It is a tale written as if it were about the people next door, but which has national tenor.

permanents as his characters, the hero, whom they all call Uncle, of course being his own country.

The next book he writes is going to be entirely different from the amusing private lives that he has previously done. It is to be set in background and character and temperament in the milieu of today, and is to be American entirely.

He said, was entirely lost to the films by the fact that he did not care to insinuate into history and legend a marriage ceremony.

There are laws in many of the states making it illegal to show a movie in which there is an illegitimate child. The law operated, he said, against a picture in Pennsylvania which depicted the birth of Christ—an amusing commentary on our moral system.

There is a savagery of mind as well as of manner about Mr. Erskine that is delightful. The art of conversation is a rare art, nowadays, in our busy life. He makes of a casual half hour just that amusing flow of time that makes his books so charming companions.

Another impression is of dinner on the balcony of Edna Ferber's apartment in a hotel that just overtops the buildings around it. As the twilight grew into dusk and then into dark, Paris faded away below and there distilled an elixir of light and larger ones, making life itself seem very remote, strange, timeless, and gay.

Edna Ferber had that afternoon written the last page of her novel. It isn't more than a third finished, but when the last page gets written, she says, she feels that the novel can't go wrong, because it has been definite and to travel toward a fact that impels many writers to begin their first. What the book is to be about she didn't say, except that "it is going to make 'Show Boat' and 'So Big' seem like the most erotic fiction ever written."

A half hour or so with Julian Green will never be erased from memory, because he is so strangely and perfectly what his own story and the kind of work he does would lead you to expect. He is exactly what you would think a boy born in Paris of Virginia blood would be like, except that he looks even more French than the typical French boy.

There is a romanticism about him, a dark broodingness and a terrific shyness that must be almost a pain to him. He speaks beautiful English, but English English, not American English. He taught French at the University of Virginia once, but he is not going back to America. He writes, as you know, in French, and his books are then translated. He is one of the most popular of the young French writers with the French. He said, as every one else has said, that American writers are not read in France for a purely economic reason.

very best of the French books cost, as the most, twelve francs. American books all cost at least seventy francs. Imagine our having to pay six times as much for French books as we do for American books, and the popularity of foreign writers would lessen.

INDIANA AUTHOR

Here's Novel of Brighter Pans,
Tinned Culture

Also Heartaches Told in Tarkington's Way.

BY EDITH WEIGLE.
"Young Mrs. Greeley," by Booth Tarkington. (Doubleday-Doran.)

In his newest novel Mr. Tarkington uses the middle western background with which his readers are so familiar, and he employs much the same Tarkingtonian character material. The men are all simple, hard working, home loving, wife-indulging individuals, the women, for the most part, are pretty and rapid, interested primarily in clothes and in forging ahead socially.

Young Mrs. Greeley's husband has just been promoted at the N. K. U. [National Kitchen Utensil company] and it is a proud moment in her life.

With prosperity, however, the inevitable snake creeps into her Garden of Eden. The snake is pretty Aurelia Hedge, whose long suffering and plodding husband, Henry, has not been promoted. Aurelia is Stella's best friend and by means of clever and rather diabolical maneuvering, best known to women of a certain mental caliber, she "works on" young Mrs. Greeley.

until the latter becomes jealous of her husband and his secretary, and without much cause, begins to think Mr. Cooper, the owner of N. K. U., pushed Bill ahead more because of her own covetous blue eyes than of his achievements.

She lives in a world of fantasy for a while, seeing herself divorced from the honest and loving Bill and married to his employer, seeing herself helping Aurelia and the plodding Henry to prosperity by influencing the great mogul of the N. K. U.

But, whoops, the rude awakening comes at a dinner party—very small and smart—given by Mr. Cooper, to which young Mrs. Greeley and her husband are invited. It is perfectly evident to the most self-deceiving soul that Mr. Cooper loves his wife, and it is equally evident that the things the Coopers and their friends discuss at table are utterly beyond the ken of pretty, empty-headed little Mrs. Greeley. As far as she is concerned the evening is a nightmare, a wasteful, a total loss and a row of zeros.

And at this point I'd like to say that if people in the Coopers' social niche do talk as they do in this book, it's a day and a night for most of us. We'd be as miserable as the poor Stella, and twice as wretched.

Scherzo, Brahms, Bach, Rouget de Lisle and Debussy were all tangled up with the first courses of the meal, and Puccini, Matisse, modernism in art, Gauguin and conservatism as represented by Velasquez were served with the salad and dessert. And the conversation about them was about as natural and spontaneous as the Elysiac episode in the "Belle Meuniere."

Poor Mrs. Greeley emerges a chastened soul and her husband vows to catch on to culture before another such ordeal! The rest of the book I shall refrain from telling, but it's the inevitable outcome of the actions described in the first part.

To the city dweller, perhaps, this

Here's First Novel
That Has Characters
You Love and Hate

"Sir Mrs. Greeley," by Lorna Rea.

If you have not read this book, the first by a young English writer, you have a great treat in store.

Not in ages has anything better been done. The style, clean cut, crisp, merciless, reminds one strongly of Katherine Mansfield and it is overlaid with a tenderness and understanding of human frailty that endears the author to the reader.

The first chapter, describing Mrs. Green (she was always called simply "Mrs. Green") by the others in the family is one of the finest pictures of an old woman since Anne Douglas Sedgwick's "The Old Countess." She is not a brutal, terrifying, yet childish old woman, like the one in "Jalna" and "Whiteoaks of Jamaica" by Mabel de la Roche, yet she clings to power, too. She is somehow more human, more understandable (if there is such a word) than any in recent fiction. In short, she is a work of art.

As for the others, the most lovable ones are those who are not mothers. Childless Mrs. Hugh, who knows she is going to die, yet tells no one except her heir and only him because he is to be her heir, is the epitome of the brave, self-controlled, generous gentleness of the Victorian epoch. She sits your deepest admiration.

Young Jessica, just married, gay, adorable, loving, is appealing. But the mothers—cold, mercenary, cut-throat—pattern Mrs. Rodney Green, whose love suffering husband one pitiful while one feels impatient with him; and selfish, possessive, weak Mrs. Edwin who makes her young son a slave by appealing to his chivalrous instincts, and who makes her husband's life a hell—these women, though mothers, lack all the real qualities of motherhood.

Here is another of those So-Called Books of Youth

"Schoolgirl," by Carmen Barnes, (Horace Liveright.)

Here is another book about the so-called young generation by one of them. According to a note by her mother, inserted at the beginning, Carmen Barnes is 16. The school described is not any particular school, but is supposed to be typical of boarding schools in the south. The girls lead a rather hectic existence, indulging in emotional experiences of many kinds more keenly than they do in their studies. There is a lot of innocent fun and a lot not so innocent.

The author of "Im Westen Nichts Neues" was born 31 years ago, of a family that emigrated from France during the Revolution and settled in the Rhineland. At 18 he went from school into the army and to the Western Front. His mother died, all his friends were killed; at the war's end he found himself alone. His subsequent history typified the despair and the loss of his generation.

He became, in succession, a teacher, an organizer in an asylum, a motor-car and motor-cycle dealer, a dramatist, a dramatic critic, editor. Last year he wrote down, without deliberation, his own and his friends' war experiences. He has described three things: the war, the fate of a generation, and true comradeship. And these were the same in all countries. His book was described in Germany and translations have been arranged into French, Italian, Dutch, Danish-Norwegian, Hungarian, Spanish, Czech, and Polish—all within four months!

"Sex in Civilization," edited by F. F. Scholten and S. D. Scholten, with an introduction by Havelock Ellis. (The Macmillan Co.)

"What I'm Wrong with Marriage," by Dr. G. V. Hamilton and Kenneth Macgregor. (Albert and Charles Boni.)

The first book, with its introduction by the famous Havelock Ellis, is divided into six headings: Sex through the ages, the role of sex in behavior, sex and psycho-analysis, sex and psycho-ecology, sex and psycho-physics, the clinical aspects of sex, and sex in poetry and fiction.

The long list of distinguished contributors represents a pretty nearly every possible approach to the subject. The book is hardly the kind to be read at one stretch, but it is consulted as a reference book it should prove of considerable value, not only because of the extensive field it covers but because of the great diversity of points of view represented.

The editors remark in the preface to the book, "This is, perhaps, the first time that such a study as 'Sex in Civilization' has ever been ventured. A century ago the very nature of sex attitudes would have thwarted such a project. In fact, it would never have been conceived."

It is a question whether one can consider a book of this sort as revolutionary. A perusal of the text indicates nothing so drastic. It is significant, however, as a sign of the times, that scientific knowledge of human behavior has extended so far that even in prudish America the subject of sex may be discussed not only in a book addressed to the lay reader but in no other way.

Chapter after chapter contains facts, case histories, the results of purposeful investigation such as we have been accustomed to in engineering, perhaps, or pathology, but not in the field of sex.

This other book is one statement of the results of a study conducted by Dr. Hamilton as director of psycho-biological research for the bureau of social hygiene. The book represents in addition to its factual material an unusual and delightful cooperation between a wise and experienced psychiatrist and a gifted writer.

There is delightful humor and satire in the story. The banquet given by the N. K. U. to honor Bill Greeley is described in the most minute detail. The flowery and redundant speeches, the noisy band, the emphasis on the "just one big family" idea, bring a chuckle. It is all so true to life.

If Mr. Tarkington has overdrawn his characters, he has done it to heighten the dramatic situations. The book is full of emotional drama.

THE UNKISSSED BRIDE
By BERTA RUCK

SYNOPSIS.
Joy Harrison, living in London and working for Dr. Rex Travers in Harley street, is contacted by a letter from her fiancé, Geoffrey Ford, a well known novelist, asking to be released from the engagement. Preoccupied with her own trouble she fails to notice that Dr. Travers seems troubled, too. Towards the end of the day he tells Joy that he has been offered a great deal of money through an unscrupulous solicitor and he will be forced to leave his home in Harley street.

Dr. Travers, a tenant, tells Rex that he has just been offered a situation with a comfortable salary in the south of France which he cannot take on, and he suggests that he recommend Joy for it. The only hitch to the plan is that they want a married doctor and Rex is a bachelor. To his partner's suggestion that he marry and take up the new post, Rex replies that he can't.

Dr. Travers, who has been listening to the doctor's colloquy, suddenly sees a method of escape and he tells Rex to marry Joy. Rex agrees to do so on a business arrangement. The doctor is amused by her suggestion and finally asks her why she made it. She tells him that she is badly in need of another job, although her real reason is to have Geoffrey read of her engagement to another man.

The doctor broods over the change his altered circumstances will have on his young wife and Rex, Percival Arthur Fitzroy. Finally he decides to take Joy at her word and they enter into an agreement to marry on a strictly business basis. Immediately after the ceremony Rex, Joy, and Percival Arthur go to the south of France. Joy enjoys her new home and Percival Arthur has the time of his life. Joy and Rex become interested in each other.

INSTALLMENT XLII.
AN INVITATION.

Joy felt a stab of swift annoyance to realize that Percival Arthur, as he had called him, was forward to shake hands with the Forde, was looking his new wife.

For there is a stage of adolescence when a boy's personal appearance changes from one to the other extreme. Certain afternoons, under the influence of his Italian acquaintance, saw him as the complete miniature of his father, tall, dark, and well-proportioned. Today, in his hurry to get off, he had changed from his swimming suit into the first shirt to hand, and he was looking like a boy of fifteen. Instead of the "clean" boy, his collar was a mess, his hair was matted, and his face was a study in the art of the pimple. He was a study in the art of the pimple. He was a study in the art of the pimple.

This young man, slim droopy, looking elegantly of the intelligentsia, in his dark suit, with his hair combed back, with his dark hair only a fraction longer than any well-groomed soldier or doctor would wear it—this young man with his atmosphere of Oxford, higher Chelsea and easy superiority was to have been her husband (her real husband). His brown glance, the touch of that long hand wearing that known signet ring had raised Joy Harrison to the stars.

Bishop McConnell Talks
Before Baptists.

Denver, Colo., June 14.—(Special.)—

With tact that brought him an ovation,

Bishop Francis J. McConnell, deposed keynote speaker of the northern Baptist convention, appeared before his 8,000 delegates as president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

The invitation to him to give the keynote speech at the convention had been withdrawn on petition of a number of Colorado's fundamentalist leaders who declared that the bishop's modernist teachings disqualified him to address the convention.

At the outset Bishop McConnell declared that he brought no idealistic schemes for church union, but he appealed to the churches for closer cooperation and harmony in fundamental enterprises such as social service, general missionary programs and philanthropic agencies.

In his brief worship of sects and narrow beliefs we are verging perniciously close to paganism," Bishop Mc-Connell declared. "The spirit of num-meralist sectarianism is the greatest evil of the churches in America."

The distant drone of a fleet-winged

John Nuyven of Chicago predicted.

He is president of the American Baptist Publication society.

"Our counterparts started with a basket," he said, "then progressed

motor boat and now, in this last decade to the chapel car.

airplane which will descend upon far places, taking from its room cabin

the prince and the princess, and all equipment, and which can, within a few hours, hold special services in many otherwise inaccessible places.

In the matter of teaching he said:

Rosenwald's $205,000 to Promote Health of South's Negroes

The Julius Rosenwald fund announced its latest gift toward the betterment of humanity yesterday in a $205,000 fund to southern and eastern hospitals, and for a Negro health survey and project to maintain Negro public health nurses in fourteen southern states.

All hospitals receiving aid either are Negro hospitals or those caring for both Negroes and whites. Each gift is made on the condition that the community raise the remainder of the money needed, explained Edwin R. Embree, president of the fund.

The charity hospital, Savannah, Ga., will receive $50,000 toward a $100,000 total for a new building and equipment. St. Agnes hospital, Raleigh, N. C., will be given $15,000 toward a total of $60,000 for a nurses' home and outpatient service; Richardson Memorial hospital, Greenville, N. C., $15,000 on condition that $15,000 more be raised for a nurses' home.

For a survey of Negro health under the auspices of the Tennessee state department of health and in cooperation with the United States public health service and Flak university, the fund is contributing $50,000. Previous gifts were $15,000 to the state hospital, Philadelphia, and $60,000 to Provident hospital, Baltimore.

It was the Professor's. In class before recitation had started I noticed a handkerchief lying on the floor by the seat of one of the girls. Since I knew the girls well and the class was small, I called out, "There's a handkerchief on the floor." No one took notice, so I again called out in louder tones, "I say, there's a handkerchief on the floor." The professor standing nearby, whom I had not seen, turned around abruptly, spied the handkerchief, and picked it up, at the same time remarking in stentorian voice, "I thank you, sir; I had not perceived it. Again I thank you for calling my attention to it." My actions will speak louder than words next time. C. D.

Will Your Features stand straight hair?

By Edna Wallace Hopper

Few girls can wear sleek straight hair. On the other hand, a mass of tight curls is unbecoming to some types, particularly the girl with the rounded face. The modern girl does not blindly follow any certain style. She must be individualistic. She must experiment and fluff her face, smooth hair, tightly drawn . . . or one of a dozen different styles.

But, whichever your type, your attractiveness is marvellously increased if your hair is of a softly caressing texture, aglow with high lights, as vibrant as youth itself!

Edna Wallace Hopper's Wave and Sheen will give it this easily-managed richness. Many busy women insist that only Wave and Sheen be used on their hair. Any toilet counter can supply you.

Whether you use curlers, an iron, or set your hair with a few coating strokes of the cream, Wave and Sheen will make it easier to control, will make it wave naturally . . . lovely to the touch and to the eye. Many busy women insist that only Wave and Sheen be used on their hair. Any toilet counter can supply you.

Actually, his case was so bad that even when the car was crowded, the seat beside him was vacant. People simply wouldn't sit next to him. And he wondered why he didn't get anywhere socially or in business.

Chinese to Learn Newspaper Work on the American Plan

BY JOHN POWELL.

(Copyright, 1929, by The Chicago Tribune.) SHANGHAI, June 14.—Vernon Nash, director of the new school of Journalism of Yenching university of Peking, who returned recently from America, was entertained by Chinese and American newspaper men, and publishers, and Mr. Nash explained the plans for the new school, which is the first to be established in the east.

Chinese publishers expressed their gratitude to American newspaper publishers and others who subscribed nearly $100,000 toward the endowment of the new school, pledged their support in the undertaking, and declared it to be their belief that the new school would further strengthen the friendship between the Chinese and American nations.

In an effort to carry out its state-wide program, that society is issuing an appeal to 1,000 prominent men to aid in raising $50,000 for a reserve fund. TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

BY JANE EDDINGTON.

Hashed Brown Potatoes.

An old time cook would laugh at a recipe for hashed brown potatoes, which to her meant simply warmed up potatoes, but now-a-days hashed brown potatoes are in great vogue and may be served with the very finest meats, and more than that, you can find recipes for them in recent cook books of great chefs and also in the books of some of the leading cooking teachers.

In one such book there is, first, a recipe for "white hashed potatoes" and then one for "hashed brown potatoes" which reads: "Chop six cold boiled potatoes very fine, adding one-half a teaspoon of salt and a dash of pepper. Put one-fourth of a cup of fat into the frying pan and when hot put in the potatoes and heat quickly and thoroughly. Press into one side of the pan to form an omelet. When well browned drain off the fat and turn onto a dish. Fat fried out from salt pork is considered the best."

Some people, and I am one, would never use this amount of fat and do not admire the greasy effect that hashed brown potatoes sometimes have. By having the pan just well greased, as it were, and spreading the potatoes out thin we can use less fat and can fold the brown potatoes as we fold an omelet.

In the recipe given by a famous chef even more fat than the above is given, that is, this chef melts three ounces of butter for three cold boiled potatoes, which he fries evenly in the butter and then rolls them into an omelet and fries again until it is, when turned out and over, well browned on the top. He turns it out like an omelet and sprinkles the whole with chopped parsley.

Hashed brown potatoes are also browned in the oven. In one recipe I find that a tablespoon of butter is used for two good sized potatoes cut in dice, but in this case a tablespoon of flour is mixed with the melted butter and a cup of milk is added to the two, really making a white sauce with a seasoning of salt and pepper. The sauce is put into the baking dish, then the potatoes with seasonings like parsley and onion juice and the top is covered lightly with bread crumbs, but this is not what people generally consider a hashed brown potato.

Events Crowd Each Other on Society's List

BY THALIA

Today's social program is exciting and widely varied with events of interest to the American Derby at Washington Park. The activities are spread over the map from Lake Forest to Lake Geneva, south to the race track. The Derby will be a brilliant occasion, with a corps of mannequins wearing the latest mode, parading in and out among the clubhouse and box occupants. There will be several lunch parties in the lovely dining rooms of the club, and an important and large society representation is expected.

The Lake Forest flower show in the service buildings of Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick's Lake Forest estate is to open at 10 o'clock today, and the entries will include flowers and exhibits from most of the north shore gardens. One of the chief features of the exhibit is the group of tables, set by Garden club members, reputed for their skill at table decoration. Mrs. J. Andrews King, chairman of the committee in charge of the show, is to give a buffet lunch party. Mrs. McCormick has arranged that all the fountains on the estate will be in play both today and tomorrow, so that visitors at the show may view the estate at its fullest beauty.

The Indian Hill Riding club's annual children's horse show begins this afternoon at 2 o'clock, and will engage the attention of all the Winnetka youngsters and their parents. Donald McPherson is chairman of the committee in charge, and Mrs. Ernest Ballard, Col. Albert Pearce, Martin Lindner, Peirce Ward, and Francis P. Butler are also officiating. There are to be fourteen classes, and the judges will be William G. Lang of Virginia, and Art Shaw.

And there are two weddings, besides, of interest. Miss Bessie Shaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walden Shaw, is to be married to Daniel Peterkin Jr., son of the Daniel Peterkins, at Lake Geneva this afternoon, and Miss Maud Sippy, daughter of Mr. Bertram Sippy, is to wed Dr. Thomas Clement

Shaw Again Spoofs World in New Show; It Opens in Warsaw

(Copyright: 1929: By the New York Times.)

WARSAW, June 14.—In his new comedy, "The Apple Cart," which opened tonight, George Bernard Shaw projects the action into the future, assuming a time when only 1 per cent of Great Britain's population—namely: the group of maniacs, take part in the elections, the parliamentary government tries to restrict to a minimum the power of the constitutional monarch, the wise and right-minded King Magnus.

At a cabinet meeting the king threatens to resign and to go into active politics. That naturally frightens the prime minister, because he is sure that Magnus, owing to his popularity, would beat all his political opponents in any election. So the cabinet yields to the king, because he would be more dangerous as an ordinary parliamentary candidate than he is on the throne.

Mr. Shaw makes fun first of left-wing socialism. The Socialist minister in an excellent talk with the king proves to be a snob and a fool. There is a good scene, in which the king and the United States ambassador appear. The latter wants to surrender to the British scepter and to form one powerful state to assure the progress of civilization. Magnus accepts this proposal, but not very enthusiastically, being afraid that England would become an American province. On this occasion Magnus speaks very favorably of British national unity. This is, perhaps, the first in which Mr. Shaw speaks in a friendly manner about his compatriots. Who knows if this sympathy for the British were not born during his last visit to Italy.

Rumors Persist Carew's Will Reword Here Tomorrow

Dispatches from Hollywood last night said that Edwin Carew, American Indian film director, and his divorced wife, Mary Akin, Carew, formerly of Chicago, are to be remarried tomorrow at the Oak Park home of Mrs. Carew's sister, Mrs. Will R. Gibson. Carew, according to the dispatch, is in Chicago at present, and his wife left Hollywood on Thursday to join him. At the Gibson home in Oak Park nothing could be learned of plans for the wedding.

PARIS, June 14.—"La Castiglione," the elaborate costume play in which Ganna Walska made her debut here as an actress, will appear in New York in an English adaptation during the coming season, Mrs. Walska—Mrs. Harold McCormick in private life—announced today.

"The play's success here exceeded all my expectations," Mrs. Walska declared, "and I regret that only fifteen special performances in French were planned and contracted for." The Comedie Des Champs Elysees where the play is presented is owned by her and the management explained the theater will be closed in the summer months according to annual custom. Although Mrs. Walska does not sing in the French version of the play it was intimated she will have a solo or two in the New York production. A special score for the play written by Jacques Ibert has been given here by a thirty piece orchestra.

INDIANA OPENS MOVE TO BURN ITS OWN COAL

Hopes to Cure Its Mining Slump.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
Indianapolis, Ind., June 14.—(Special.)—Indiana, after a diagnosis of its coal mining industry, laid down a remedy tonight designated to get it on its feet again. The prescription, as set out by Gov. Harry Leslie, is to "burn Indiana coal in Indiana."

The program was mapped out by the governor after consultation with operators, miners, business men and the general public. It was announced tonight at a dinner at the Claypool hotel, attended by 250 representatives of interested groups.

At present, about 25,000,000 tons of bituminous are consumed in the state each year, but of this about 75 per cent is shipped in from outside by Indiana's most serious competitors, the nonunion fields of West Virginia and Kentucky. Coal is produced in sixteen Indiana counties, but production is far below normal, due to several factors.

Leaders Deliver Talks.

The toastmaster tonight was Dick Miller, Indianapolis banker, and addresses viewing the coal problem from various angles were made by Mayor L. E. Black, H. A. Glover, president of the Coal Trade Association of Indiana; John E. Frederick, president Indiana state chamber of commerce; Michael E. Foley, Indianapolis attorney; James B. Pauley of Chicago, an operator; J. E. Bjorkholm of Milwaukee; David E. Ross, president of the board of trustees of Purdue university; and Paul Q. Richey, president Indianapolis chamber of commerce. The plan presented by Gov. Leslie was in brief:

All tax supported buildings and institutions to use Indiana coal.

Demonstration work at the state engineering schools to show the public the most efficient way of burning Indiana coal.

Mobilize commercial and civic organizations to assist in the campaign. Organize a state coal bureau to promote the work.

Reviews Present Slump.

"The deposits of Indiana coal, our largest natural resource," said Gov. Leslie, "exceed 26,000,000,000 tons, enough to supply the state for several hundred years. Of the coal consumed yearly in this state, 75 per cent is foreign, a contributing factor to the present deplorable condition of the Indiana mining industry. This condition can be materially improved if consumers of coal in Indiana will burn the home product."

"Indiana coal is shown by the engineers to be just as good as that mined in other states, and it will produce just as much heat. The saving in freight charges of from $1.30 to $2.75 a ton is in itself of sufficient importance to justify and, in fact, to require the use of Indiana coal in Indiana."

The diagnosticians attribute the Indiana mining slump to a growing tendency on the part of the public to use oil for fuel. This is believed to have displaced about 20 per cent of the soft coal output.

Coal Burning More Scientific.

Then, too, the railroads are using coal more efficiently, while the tremendous development of electrical energy for power purposes has displaced coal. The generating plants get more power out of a ton of coal than ever before, and the power is distributed to thousands of plants that formerly relied on coal. The use of water power also is constantly growing.

All these factors were set forth when the diagnosticians got to work tonight at the sick bed of the mining industry. If Indiana production per man has been increasing steadily, due to mechanization, but total output is lagging. In 1918, the war year, Indiana produced 30,000,000 tons, the peak. The average normal output is set at about 25,000,000 tons. In 1927 it was only 18,000,000 tons.

Thousands of Miners Idle.
In 1923 the last "normal" year, Indiana employed 45,408 miners, who worked an average of 128 days in the year. In 1927 the mines employed 24,352, who averaged 120 days' work. And the mines today are not working as well as in 1927.

The average selling price per ton was $2.48 in 1923 and $2.03 in 1927, a difference of 45 cents a ton. The total value of the output at the mine was $65,046,000 in 1923. In 1927 it dropped to $39,551,000. These are all government figures.

Meanwhile, however, while output, price and total value of the Indiana mine all dropped, productivity per man went up. In Indiana the average output per day per man was 6.43 tons in 1923, while in 1927 it rose to 6.13 tons. New and improved mining methods brought it about. And while the Indiana miner was getting out 6.13 tons a day in 1927, the average soft coal miner in the United States was turning out 4.55 tons.

Statisticians estimate about 200 million dollars is invested in the Indiana mine, and the new movement to revivify the industry is estimated in its slogan, "Burn Indiana Coal in Indiana."

CRIMINAL COURT.

Peter Parake and Fred Nieman, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in the Penitentiary by Judge Charles A. Williams.
Roy Depont, contributing to delinquency of a child, sentenced to 1 year in the Reformatory and fined $200 by Judge G. Fred Bush.

"Prince" Arthur Quinn, Democratic boss of the 42d ward, manipulated the ballots in the 23d precinct of that ward to show that the candidates he favored received a large majority of the votes when, according to the testimony yesterday of the voters themselves, Quinn's choices received few votes. Quinn and four precinct election officials are on trial before Judge Harry B. Miller in the Criminal court charged with having manipulated ballots during the mayoralty election of 1927.

Eleven voters of the 23d precinct were called to the witness stand yesterday, the first day of the trial. Nine of the eleven testified that they voted for Thompson as against Dever for mayor. The state expects to produce at least seventy such witnesses. The precinct return showed Thompson received only 10 votes, against 400 for Dever.

One of the precinct election officials, who is reported to have turned state's evidence, will testify today of Monday about how the manipulations took place.

KELLOGG SEEKS PEACE; McNUTT ASKS SECURITY

Legion Sponsors Flag Day
Radio Program.

New York, June 14.—(AP)—Frank B. Kellogg, former secretary of state; William Fortune, president of the American Peace society, and Paul V. McNutt, national commander of the American Legion, made pleas for world peace in radio addresses tonight in a flag day observance program sponsored by the American Legion.

The speeches were broadcast over a nation-wide hookup by the National Broadcasting company.

Mr. Kellogg advocated a program of arbitration for settlement of international disputes and the reduction of armaments as the practical solution for the peace problem.

In outlining his plan for the arbitration of international disputes, Mr. Kellogg said armaments should be reduced to a point where armies and navies "will not be a menace to peace."

Mr. McNutt, however, said that while the Legion asks a better method of war for settling international disputes, the methods must "not involve loss of national integrity or security."

"We feel that the nation can be practical in its defense and at the same time maintain the spiritual and material leadership of the world while we work for world peace," he said.

Let Old Glory Lead.

"The flag of our country has led to victory in every war in which the nation has engaged," McNutt continued. "But one victory is yet to be achieved. It is the victory of peace over strife. It is our earnest prayer that our flag lead to that victory. For this reason on flag day the American Legion invites consideration of practical methods of securing and maintaining peace."

Such peace, he asserted, must be "a permanent peace," and until such is found and accepted "this nation must provide an adequate national defense based on an equal service from all and special profit to none."

NICARAGUA GRANTS U. S. PERMISSION TO MAKE CANAL SURVEY

Washington, D. C., June 14.—(AP)—The American government has secured permission from Nicaragua to dispatch to that country a battalion of army engineer troops to make a preliminary investigation and survey of the practicability and approximate cost of an interoceanic canal route through Nicaragua.

The battalion will be dispatched to Nicaragua under orders of the war department.

The preliminary survey is planned to secure detailed information for a joint army-civilian engineering commission which will be appointed by the President.

The American legation at Managua today notified the state department that the Nicaraguan government had granted permission.

Mr. Kellogg said armaments should be reduced to a point where armies and navies "will not be a menace to peace."

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
SANDWICH, England, June 14.—The ill luck which has beset American stars of other days in the British amateur golf championship descended upon Johnny Dawson just as he seemed certain of clinching a semi-final victory this afternoon which would have pitted him against Cyril Hay in the final tomorrow.

When ill luck had done with Johnny, a chance for the British golf crown had been snatched from under the nose by John Smith, canny character from the Scottish highlands, who beat the Chicago youngster at the nineteenth hole.

Ten minutes before the end Dawson seemed assured of victory and some of his admirers already had decided the match in order to watch the finish of the other semi-final match between Tolley and Rex Hart, which ended at the eighteenth hole with a one hole victory for Tolley.

Three Up and Three to Go.
A beautiful four at the fifteenth had Dawson three up and three to go. Up to this point his game had been so perfect that there seemed no chance of defeat. But Johnny lost the four holes in a row and with this chance to win the title which only Jess Sweetser has been able to win in America since 1904, when the amateur crown was brought back to the United States from this same great swept, treacherous course.

The course of events at those last four holes stunned the large and fashionable gallery which, though it never seemed to show its partisanship, roared loudly when one stroke of fortune after another yanked victory from the hands of the American.

At the short sixteenth a quiet shot which had begun to abate after Dawson's tee shot into a bunker, landed in the hole and left him one up.

The American needed but halve the eighteenth hole to win the match, and when he laid his approach putt trickled down the hole, leaving Smith with a 10-foot putt to win and square the match, victory seemed his.

But Smith proved equal to the occasion and his long curling putt trickled down the hole, leaving Smith with a 10-foot putt to win and square the match, victory seemed his.

Defends Evans, 4 and 5.
Dawson and Smith gave the best exhibition of golf the tournament has yet seen. Dawson was one up at the eighth hole, going out in 35 to Smith's 36, this despite a blinding rainstorm.

A middle three at the eleventh, aided by a ten yard putt, made the champion two up and though he lost the twelfth, where he bunkered, he had his lead at the next hole.

There he was on the green in two and his approach lipped the cup, Smith conceding the hole.

This morning Dawson made a superb strike when he put out A. J. Evans, six and five, doing the last eight holes for under four. He won the first two holes and was never in danger after that.

Lady Nancy Astor, the vivacious American-born member of parliament, was skipped along beside the youthful champion during his matches throughout the week, was the most disappointed of all at Dawson's last minute defeat tonight.

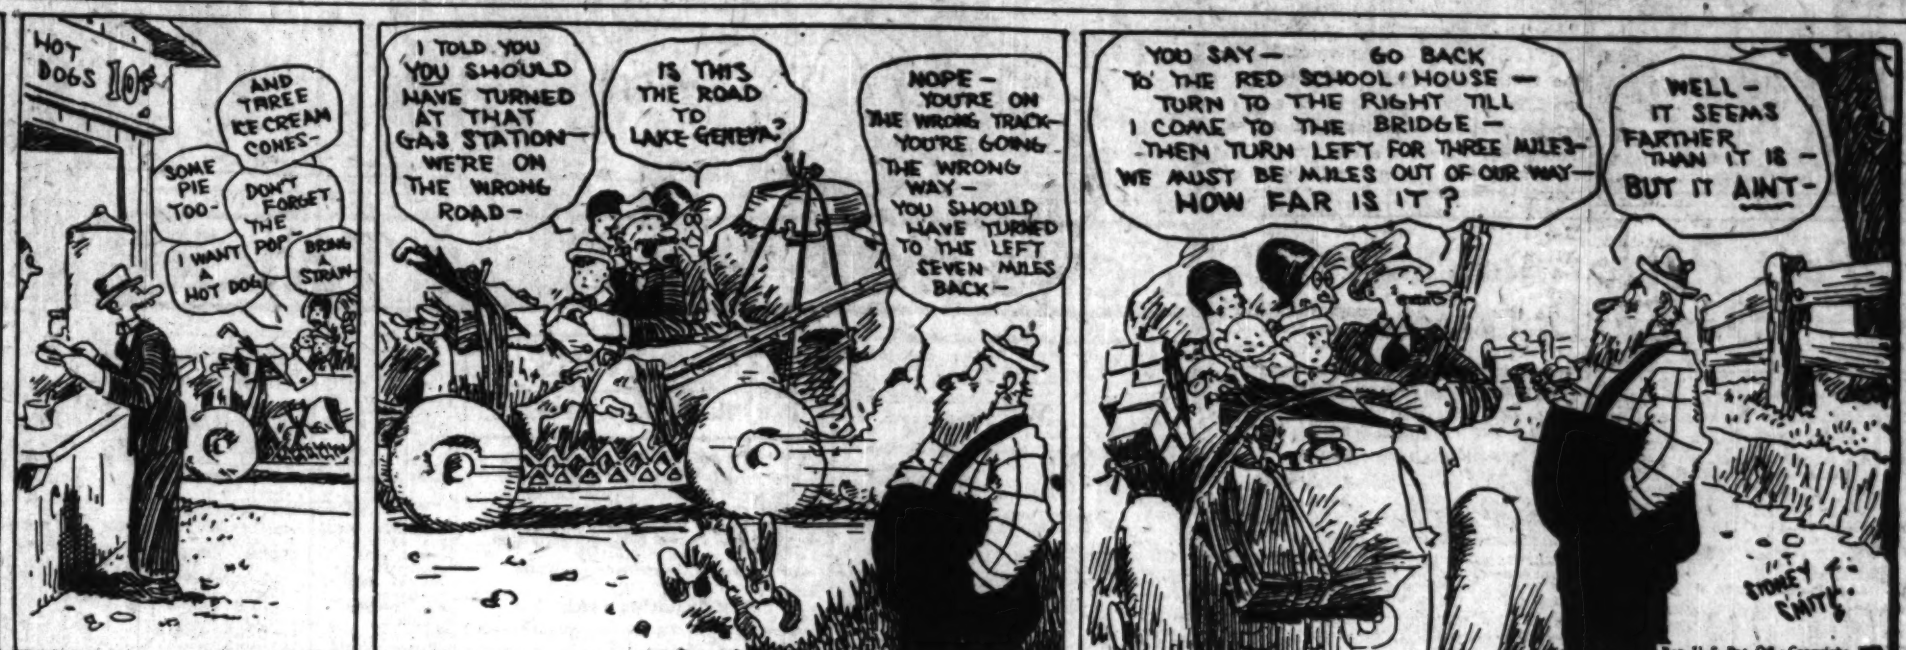

"It is unbelievable," she cried, and she ran up to console the American, who took his beating good-naturedly.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

NEW YORK, June 14.—The heavy-weight championship of the world is about to take shape again, and one who looks forward to some very beautiful cheating and counter-cheating as the competition warms and the money becomes more substantial. When the time finally comes to confer the championship on one of the boys, the cheating will rise to a sort of ecstasy, for the title is a two million dollar property, in round numbers, and you might, or might not, be surprised at the subtlety and beauty of the cheating that the sportsmen in the profession can achieve with that much money to inspire them.

It appears that, no matter which one of the boxers in the competition should win the title this time, it will return to the possession of the coarse characters of pugilism because one sees no rich and socially refined millionaire anywhere in the tournament.

The entire directorate of the old Jack Delaney property, which, in its time, was the Credit Mobilier of the pugilistic profession, it now assembled around Max Schmelling, the ferocious Frankfurter from Frankfurt on the Main, and this satisfies me that conniving will flourish and unscrupulously become a household word before the summer is over.

A Pleasant Reversion.
This will be a pleasant reversion, because the rich and socially refined millionaires of the Tunney administration were a watery element, neither impressive nor funny, but only ideal citizens and gullible. They thought of Mr. Tunney as a monkish recluse, who scoured himself with a hair shirt and chains in his bare cubicle in the pines at Speculator, and that he was in a spirit of resentment at those persons of low mind and perished in regarding him as an extremely practical business man and his professional practical showmanship.

Jack Dempsey has the ideal temperament for a champion of the world and it seems a pity that a mind so well adjusted to the business should be chained to an ageing physique. He seems fully informed about the great Philadelphia cheat, for instance, and although he was to have been the victim, he complained, feeling, possibly, that those who live by the cheat must perish by the cheat.

Mr. Dempsey's Version.
"Hoff and Attell claimed they had a hidden rule for sale," Mr. Dempsey said. "Under this rule, a doctor's verdict would have set aside the referee's decision. So, any time the going became tough, the one who bought the insurance could go down, claiming a foul and, if a doctor would go through the ropes, take a look at the insured and say, 'Foul; this guy wins.'"

"But," Mr. Dempsey continued, "it turned out that Tunney didn't need the insurance. I was all in and he licked me, even up. That is why he wouldn't pay Hoff."

"But, Mr. Dempsey," I objected. "Nobody has ever heard of this rule. It wasn't spread on the books."

"No," he agreed. "But you never would have heard of the hidden rule about the long count in Chicago if I hadn't knocked him out that time. When he put me down, the count started before I hit the floor."

"This all sounds very weird to me," I said to Mr. Dempsey. "Can such things really be in sport? I mean, Mr. Tunney was always so up-right. He told me so, personally."

"It is a business," he said. "Tunney was all right. I never cared for him much, personally, but that doesn't mean anything. When an ordinary fighter gets the title and makes a couple of million, he's smart."

'WAY BACK WHEN—DERBY DAY 35 YEARS AGO

Do you remember Derby day at Washington Park in 1894? That was the day of days for Chicago racing fans, who made it a gala affair, the high spot of the turf season. It was the eleventh renewal of the American Derby, the event which had inaugurated the opening of Washington Park in 1884 under the presidency of Lieut. Gen. Phil Sheridan. The carriage approach to the clubhouse, the clubhouse lawn, and grand stand are shown in these old pictures from a souvenir program. The crowd along the infield fence, the carriages, tally-ho coaches so common in the era before the automobile, is the other reprint. Rey el Santa Anita was the winner in 1894.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

AMERICAN DERBY.
CLYDE VAN DUSEN, installed a pronounced favorite, will answer this afternoon in the American Derby at new Washington Park that question which has been asked ever since he won the Kentucky Derby at Louisville on May 15. That question is, just how good is this small, rather unimpressive looking scion of Man o' War?

The answer would be more conclusive, perhaps, if Blue Larkspur were victorious because Clyde Van Dusen cannot be blamed because the Bradley stable, already once beaten, refused the issue. It is at least an indirect tribute to Clyde's prowess that Blue Larkspur's trainer thought shipment after the Belmont stakes victory was asking too much of the Black Servant colt. Furthermore, many of Van Dusen's admirers assert this gelding can take his principal opponent any time they meet, fast or wet track.

If the track is heavy or sloppy this will in fact be a good race, for the turf expression goes, "just eats mud." If the track is fast and the contention afforded, more other can claim 3 year old supremacy before beating this game little fellow.

Of course, from out of that field may come a surprise victor. There is Nashapur, which ran such a good race at Louisville and such a poor race in the Fairmount Derby, and there is Karl Eitel, which ran indifferently at Louisville and won at St. Louis, and there is Windy City, which runs so well in Derby trials, and Dr. Freeland, Prankness victor, and African, which ran second to Blue Larkspur in the Belmont stakes blue.

In a field which comprises the best 3 year olds in training with the exception of Blue Larkspur and Jack High, which suffered cuts in the Belmont, Chicago owners are better represented than usual with Karl Eitel, belonging to J. J. Connelley; Minotaur, belonging to John R. Thompson, and Windy City, belonging to F. M. Grabner.

What a race would arise from that crowd if a Chicago owned colt triumphed!

Derby Facts

FOLLOWING are the salient facts of the revival of the American Derby this afternoon at Washington Park:

Race-American Derby. Value—$25,000 added and $5,000 trophy. Place—Washington Park, Homewood, Ill. Entries—Sixteen overnight. Distance—One mile and a quarter. Estimated crowd—20,000. Favorite—Clyde Van Dusen, 8 to 5. Weather—Increasing clouds and warm. Track condition—Slow. Post time for Derby—2 p. m.

BY FRENCH LANE.
Derby day may dawn fair and clear in Chicago, but the twenty-first renewal of the American Derby will be run over a slow or heavy track at Washington Park this afternoon.

This became certain last night after 16 eligibles for the $30,000 fixture had been named through the entry box to contest for the rich 3 year old prize. It is expected that 10 or a dozen of them will parade to the post before a crowd which may run upwards of 50,000.

In the overnight betting Clyde Van Dusen ruled the overwhelming favorite at 8 to 5. But there was so much backing for the Salmon-Wilson entry of Africa, Dr. Freeland, and Black Diamond it began to appear as if the powerful eastern Derby threat would be an equal choice with Clyde Van Dusen at post time, with the odds against each at about 2 to 1.

Several Welcome Rain.
While Clyde Van Dusen romped to an easy yet spectacular triumph over Churchill Downs track a month ago in the Kentucky Derby, the going at Washington Park today will be entirely different. While Clyde Van Dusen's backers were shouting to the heavens and pleading with the weatherman to provide more rain, there were other owners who believed their charges would have just as much of an advantage in the heavy going.

The vast interest in the renewal of the American Derby was a reminder of the golden days at Washington Park a quarter of a century ago. State street and its tributaries have fairly overflowed with the Derby atmosphere for several days. Posters, bunting, photographs and advertisements have appeared in every window until all Chicago knows that the race which once was known as the world over will be revived at new Washington Park this afternoon. This was a tribute to Col. Matt J. Winn, the master chairman of the Derby, who made the Kentucky Derby the great race of the year in America.

On the lawn, in the stands and in the betting enclosure at Washington Park yesterday visitors from all parts of the country were in evidence.

Greater Washington Park.
New Washington Park is far superior to old Washington Park. The new track appointments exceed the old place in every particular. It has more patrons than the revered Chicago racing grounds and its social sponsors are as exclusive and more numerous than old Washington Park ever boasted.

New Washington Park can accommodate a crowd three times as large as any ever gathered at old Washington Park. It has been 25 years since Highball led home his rivals in the last American Derby run at old Washington Park, but the interest and the sentiment shown in today's renewal seems to indicate the speed of time has been bridged. Today the American Derby may come back and become as famous as it was a quarter century ago.

Except for Blue Larkspur and Jack High, every great 3 year old of the year will be in today's parade to the post. Clyde Van Dusen, Kentucky Derby winner, will be there. So will Dr. Freeland, the Prankness winner; Karl Eitel, the Fairmount Derby winner; Nashapur, the Tia Juana Derby star, and the winners of numerous other minor stakes during the early part of the season.

Silverdale Reaches Track.
Some in the overnight field of 16 perhaps are not worthy of a Derby appearance, but for the most part these colts are owned by Chicagoans who are anxious to see the American Derby come back to the importance it once held in American turf affairs. If they are willing to pay the fees starting fee just to see their colts displayed in an American Derby no one else can be blamed. In the halcyon days favorites did not always win the American Derby. It frequently happened that a 50 or 100 to 1 shot was showing in front at the finish and that may happen this afternoon.

The last of the Derby starters arrived yesterday when Silverdale, Edward Beale McLean's color bearer, pulled in from Latonia but there was

HUSKIES WIN 2 CREW RACES FROM BADGERS

Madison, Wis., June 14.—(Special.)—After gaining an early lead of one-half a length, the Wisconsin crew lost to the Washington variety in the last mile of their two mile race over Lake Mendota tonight. The Huskies flashed across the finish line one and three-quarter lengths ahead of the Badgers. This time was 11:52.

Wisconsin had a yard lead at the half way mark, but Orr, the Washington stroke, increased the pace from 34 to 36 strokes a minute. The Badgers also came up to this figure, but lost power in making the change. A last minute spurt, however made up a half length for the Wisconsin shell. The Washington junior varsity boat was an easy winner over the Badger Jaycees, finishing six lengths ahead in the time of 11:30.

Washington and Wisconsin crews will leave tomorrow afternoon for Poughkeepsie, N. Y., the scene of the annual collegiate regatta, June 24. Coach Mike Murphy will take a squad of twelve men to the national classic. Murphy was far from disappointed with the performance of the Badgers and believes that there is more power in the Wisconsin boat than the men exhibited tonight. The Badgers' ability to hold Washington to such a close margin was hailed as encouraging by Wisconsin fans. More than 18,000 lined the banks of Lake Mendota to watch the race.

Cubs Resume Series with Phils Today

By Edward Burns.

Washington, D. C., June 14.—There was nothing new or ready about the White Sox's bats this afternoon. The day previous they had reeled off an impressive medley of base hits, but the tune was entirely different today with Irving Hadley directing.

Chicagoans nicked this fellow for only half dozen widely scattered singles and this was not enough to keep the Senators from grasping the profoundness of a 4 to 1 decision.

Max because of necessity than clutch. Boss Blackburn selected today's lineup, the butcher boy from the White Sox or some place, to handle the firing assignment and the tall right hander maintained his reputation for failing to fool the enemy in the seventh. They bunched two hits, one a fluke, with a pass in the second to attain a brace of runs. They exploded three more in the fifth, when an error should have retired the side and this again accounted for the two other Senatorial tallies. Adkins then was excused and McKain finished without additional fireworks.

Hoffman Misses Chance.

What made Hadley a good hurler was his ability to stop the Sox after they had put runners on the bases. It is one of the nine chapters a hit might have been the means of causing trouble, but the hit was never made. In the third, for instance, a double and two passes filled the Sox after two were out, but when the opportunity was presented to Clarence Hoffman he merely bounced to the pitcher. Eye in the fourth, when the Sox came into possession of their city run, there was no particular out of batting strength. The run was only because the Senators preferred to make a play at another base.

The roughing up of Adkins in the second chapter started with Barnes slipping one to left center for three strikes. Cronin walked and Judge stepped a fly that Hoffman pulled down close to the right field wall. Barnes glided home after the catch. Then West slashed a line single to right and Hadley and Myer batted home to make the game safe for the speedy Senators.

Clellin Steals Second.

Hadley opened the Sox fourth by sending free transportation to Watwood. Kamm followed this with a fly ball to Judge. Clellin stole a base in center, putting Watwood on third. Spider Bill immediately stole second. Kerr then bounced to Cronin, who tossed to Myer, catching Clellin coming into third. Watwood ran home on this play. In five of the four remaining innings the Sox had one or more men on the sacks, but nothing came of it.

Adkins had two out in the fifth before any semblance of trouble appeared. Then Hadley started something with a single. Myer also hit one. Rios grounded to Kerr, but it was a treacherous hopper and the Sox second sacker fumbled, filling the bases. Then West slashed a line single to right and Hadley and Myer batted home to make the game safe for the speedy Senators.

Babe Ruth Picks Chesapeake Bay for Spot to Rest

Annapolis, Md., June 14.—[Special.]

It developed here today that Babe Ruth, baseball's king of swat, is regaining his strength at Shadyside on the Chesapeake bay. He is spending most of his time in pursuit of crabs, which are more plentiful in this section than at any time in the last ten years.

The Bam and his bride are visiting Harry Mohler, Washington business man and a close friend who has a cottage at Shadyside, a resort about 20 miles from Annapolis. It is about 20 miles from Ruth's old home in Baltimore.

Ruth is reported as using the trout-line method of catching crabs. He rows to a point recommended as good crabbing ground and throws overboard his long line, with smaller baited lines tied to it at intervals. He also does a lot of fishing.

Ruth's stay at Shadyside is indefinite.

Black Bass Season Opens Here Sunday

By Bob Becker.

Tomorrow it's black bass for Illinois fishermen. The state of Illinois has put it "on the books" that it is unlawful to catch, or take, or attempt to catch or take, or have in possession, black bass, between the 1st day of March and the 15th of June, both inclusive, of any year; and any black bass caught or taken during the aforesaid period, shall be immediately returned to the waters from which taken.

This means that on tomorrow, June 16, the lid is off and several hundreds of thousands of Illinois fishermen are expected to sling baits at the bronze-backs beginning tomorrow morning. The limit is ten per day and each fish must measure 10 inches to be legal.

In northern Illinois Lake Marie is a pretty good bet for tomorrow's fishing trip. Take highway 21 from Chicago until almost to Antioch and then west to the lake. Pistakee, Nippersink and Grass lake are other lakes where one ought to be able to snag a pickerel or a bass.

Team Matches Innovation in Seniors' Golf

By Harland Rohm.

The Illinois seniors, that group of golfers at 50 years and more who get together twice each year for as keenly contested and as happy a day of golf as could be imagined, will have an innovation on the first day of the sixth annual spring tournament at the Illinois Country club at Springfield, Ill., next Wednesday and Thursday.

In place of a day of practice, the seniors will stage a team match.

Twenty or more teams of eight men each, will compete with each other on the basis of low net score. Under the direction of Charles Beach, eighteen teams already have been entered from Glen View, Skokie, Rosemont, Illinois, Oak Park, Exmoor, Indian Hill, Bunker Hill, Midlothian, two from Olympia Fields, Wildwood, Onwentsla and several other teams with members from more than one club.

The program for the tournament, which has just been distributed, schedules a special train leaving Chicago at 6:30 Tuesday evening and arriving in Springfield that night. The team match will begin at 8:30 Wednesday morning and after it, at 4 o'clock, the seniors will call on Gov. Emerson. Later they will visit the Lincoln monument and dinner will be served at 7.

Thursday will bring the usual individual tournament in five classes, according to age. There will be six prizes in each class, for first, second, third, and fourth low net, least number of putts and low gross. The association dinner will be held at 7:30 o'clock Thursday evening and the seniors will board the train for Chicago late in the evening, arriving in Chicago Friday morning.

Most of the professionals who competed in the national open qualifying rounds at Olympia Fields last Monday, which means all the best in the Chicago district, will play at Sun Valley Monday in the third North Shore open championship. Play will be over 36 holes, with no gallery fee.

At the same time Monday, the women public park golfers will begin their week's argument for the city championship at Marquette park with an 18 hole qualifying round. Early entries indicate that a large field will compete and more are expected to enter at the tee.

Mrs. Oscar C. Horn, who won the title as a member of Marquette last year, is entered from Jackson park. Among other entrants prominent in women's parks golf are Miss Grace Saunders, president of the Marquette club; Mrs. Maud Aldrich, Mrs. F. S. FitzGibbon, Mrs. E. W. Bumpus, and Mrs. Lillian M. Zech.

Elmer Solemn in Tune with Evening's Radio

Finds Worthy Offerings of Sentimental Nature.

BY ELMER DOUGLASS.

A tone of solemnity seemed to pervade many of the important radio programs last evening.

There was a father's program from W-G-N, 8 to 8:30. In this among others were such old numbers as "My Little Gray Home in the West," "Take Me Back to Babyland," "Princess's Lullaby," "The Whistler and His Dog," the still more stirring "Soldiers' Chorus" from "Faust," and the cheery dance music, "The Wedding of the Fair Maid."

The American Legion flag day program from New York, through WLS, 9 to 10, was stirring for its musical settings during the first half hour, the last half being devoted to addresses by notable men among them Colonel Paul V. McNutt of the American Legion and Frank B. Kellogg, former Secretary of State.

"In a Russian Village," from New York, through WMAA, 9 to 9:30, contained many varieties of Russian songs, sung as only Russian voices can sing them. When we hear a Russian vocal ensemble in typical Russian song we are somehow moved and impressed.

Do you remember "Way Back When," W-G-N, 10:15, when people waited to "After the Ball" was "Over" when every tenor sang "My Old Kentucky Home" and the family gathered around the old square piano and sang "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia"? [That was very old; I had to do to use the announcer's material.]

As a result of a speeding episode in Libertyville on June 8, Mrs. Emma Wehrenberg of Mundelein, the alleged speeder, and Frank Druba, the alleged captor, both will face charges at Libertyville, Ill., court, at 10 o'clock today.

According to Druba, Mrs. Wehrenberg sped through Libertyville at 65 miles an hour in a new silver and refused to halt until he had chased her three miles. He then took her back to Libertyville for booking.

TWO GIVEN YEAR SENTENCES FOR STABBING TIRES

Frank Stiles, owner of the Juneway garage, 1824 Juneway terrace, and Eugene Ryan, who has the accessory concession at the garage, were in the Bridwell last night starting sentences of one day in jail for their conviction for puncturing tires of Rogers Park motorists, who parked their cars in a vacant lot near the garage. The cell sentences and fines of $500 each were imposed by Municipal Judge Joseph W. Schulman.

Twenty charges of malicious mischief were placed against each defendant. Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller, who prosecuted the case in cooperation with the Chicago Motor club, asked for sentences of three years each, but the judge ruled that he would find the men guilty of all charges and give them the maximum sentences, but would allow the penalties to run concurrently.

Prosecutor Mueller said the men should be given as severe penalties as possible to set an example to racketeers.

MONTGOMERY WARD CO. CUTS ANOTHER MELON

Nearly 55 Millions Given in Rights.

By O. A. MATHER.

In line with its plan for a big chain store system to cover the whole country, Montgomery Ward & Co. yesterday announced a "melon" in the form of stock purchase rights worth nearly $55,000,000 to stockholders. Only eight months ago a similar stock purchase privilege was offered, which was worth about $30,000,000 at the market price of the stock at that time and would represent nearly $20,000,000 at the current market price.

The directors voted yesterday to offer stockholders of record on July 11 the right to purchase one new share of $10 stock for each share held. At yesterday's final price of 11 1/2, the rights are worth about $16 on each of the 3,423,753 common shares now outstanding. So the total value of the rights would be worth $54,780,000. The rights will be mailed to common stockholders on July 26 and the rights will expire on Aug. 26.

May Increase Dividends.

However, the "melon" may prove to be even more valuable, as President George B. Everett announced that he will recommend that the annual dividend rate on the common stock be increased from $2.50 to $2.75, effective with the November payment. The stock offering will require 1,131,351 additional shares, bringing the outstanding shares to 4,555,104. The company has authorized an issue of 6,000,000 shares. This will leave about 1,445,000 shares for future purposes.

"The company's expansion program is developing rapidly," Mr. Everett said in connection with the offering. "The new mail order plants at Albany, Denver, and Fort Worth have been completed and now are open. There will be more than 400 chain and department stores in operation by Sept. 1 and our plans call for a total of 500 stores at the end of the year. Profits are running in excess of 10% and it appears that profits for the year will be in excess of $1,000,000. The company's expansion program is developing rapidly."

Elect New Director.

The new stock will receive the current quarterly dividend of 6 1/2 cents, which is payable Aug. 14 to stockholders of record Aug. 1, if the new shares are paid for by Aug. 1. Election of Jackson E. Reynolds, president of the First National bank of New York, as a director to succeed Robert J. Thorne, who resigned, was announced yesterday.

THE CHICAGO FEDERAL RESERVE BANK

The Chicago Federal Reserve bank yesterday made no announcement of any change in its 5 per cent discount rate following the directors' meeting yesterday. The bank's policy is to keep the rate at 5 per cent unless there is a change in the rate was not discussed. No increase had been expected in the rate because the New York bank had made no change on Thursday. The Federal Reserve bank in Chicago is the only one of the twelve banks in the United States that has not increased its rate.

MAY STATISTICS REVEAL CUT IN COPPER OUTPUT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.] New York, June 14.—A cut in output is revealed in copper statistics for May, which show a decrease in refined copper of 12,918 short tons, or about 2.5 per cent, in this country, and of about 2,000,000 pounds in refined copper in France and Great Britain. These figures make a better showing than was expected in view of the rather meager buying that has characterized the copper market for close to three months, according to trade authorities.

Utah Copper Company Reduces Wages Again

St. Lake City, Utah, June 14.—(AP)—Notice of a wage decrease of 25 cents a day, effective June 16, has been posted by the Utah Copper company here today. The decrease, the second in the last two months, affects about 2,500 mine, mill, and general workers, and is due to lower copper prices. The company's wage scale now is 75 cents a day above that of last October.

Reviews Union Labor Efforts in Bank Field

By SCRUTATOR.

Efforts of union labor to get directly into the financial and business fields, with the unions and their members as stockholders, began on an appreciable scale in 1920 and expanded at a good rate until the end of 1925. Since then there has been an abandonment of some of the enterprises, particularly in the financial field, and the future looks favorable for them.

AMBITION PROGRAM

A corporation known as the Brotherhood Investment company also was formed, and its management under the leadership of Warren S. Stone. The bank as such was successful, and one of them, the Engineers National of Cleveland, had in 1925 total resources of more than $100,000,000. The bank's stockholders were more than a dozen banks at one time, and the total movement was forty-one. At last year's meeting the number in existence was twenty-eight.

ANTAGONISM DEVELOPS

Considerable antagonism developed to the brotherhood program in the coal fields, and some of the other unions asserted that the locomotive engineers were the only ones to have the company thrown into receivership. It seems to be generally admitted that a fair price for the Florida land will make it possible for the concern to pay out its assets as figured at more than fourteen million dollars.

THE RESULT WAS A FIGHT ON THE POLICE

The result was a fight on the police of Mr. Stone, who has since died, and a determination on the part of the brotherhood to liquidate all its financial and real estate interests in 1927, and their banks have since been going ahead rather more slowly than those controlled by other unions.

FEDERATION BANK AND TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK

THE CLOTHING WORKERS' UNION ALSO

The clothing workers' union also has been successful in its efforts to get into the financial and real estate fields, and has been successful in its efforts to get into the financial and real estate fields, and has been successful in its efforts to get into the financial and real estate fields.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.] New York, June 14.—There were any number of items in the day's news calculated to warm the cockles of a bull trader's heart today and some of the optimism thereby generated found an outlet in more generous stock buying.

The result was the largest market in something like a week, transactions totaling 3,229,000 shares and the advance broadening out substantially in various directions. Leaders of the new forward movement were ahead from two to eight points or more at the close.

Helpful Developments.

Bullish sentiment was helped by the favorable nature of developments in the credit situation such as the buying of government bonds and open market bids by the Federal reserve, particularly the New York bank; the retention of the 5 per cent bank rate; the absence of any important change in the collateral borrowing market; the week end, most important of all, the decidedly easier tone to the time money market, where loans on a ninety day basis were reported made at 5 per cent with that rate ruling for all maturities.

Passage of the farm relief bill in the form favored by President Hoover, announcement of the Montgomery Ward stock melon, and the reports showing "bigger and better" earnings for the steel companies, were other factors contributing to the improved situation.

Stronger Technical Position.

Moreover, the action of the market indicated that its technical position was stronger than has generally been supposed and the short interest correspondingly larger.

Stocks lunged forward from the opening with the interest broadening out measurably as the season progressed. The usual run of week-end trading and cut down the showing of the market, but the market was a pretty well absorbed and the main body had a good forward look at the finish.

The chief interest, however, remained in the utilities, American and Foreign Power, Consolidated Gas, Standard Gas and Electric and Commonwealth Power shooting ahead briskly—the last named for a net gain of nearly 20 points. There was a story in the street that United Corporation

WHEAT RESPONDS SLOWLY TO FARM RELIEF RECALL

Market Closes with Only Fractional Gains.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

The practical assurance that the farm relief bill would be signed by President Hoover within a day or so failed to get the wheat market out of the rut into which it has fallen in the last few days, and while there was a small stir following the announcement that the senate had accepted the conference report, there was little enthusiasm displayed on the part of the trade, and prices reacted around 10 from the best figures and close with net gains of 1/16 to 1/8 with July 107 1/2 to 107 3/4, September 111 1/2 to 111 3/4, and December 116 1/2 to 117.

Strength in wheat at Winnipeg and dry weather talk from the Canadian northwest were largely responsible for the firm undertone displayed here during the day. Winnipeg closed 1/16 higher. Weakness in new crop wheat at the gulf served to temper bullish sentiment, as No. 2 hard there was offered at 1/16 over Chicago July, with July prices at 107 1/2 to 107 3/4 and a local house has bought 100,000 bu. of No. 1 hard in the last two days to be shipped to Kansas City at 10 over July.

Other grains were firmer with wheat and on unfavorable weather comment, with corn closing 1/16 higher, with July 92 1/2 to 92 3/4, September 93 1/2 to 93 3/4, and December 94 1/2 to 94 3/4. Oats were 1/16 higher, July being 44 1/2 to 44 3/4, and December 45 1/2 to 45 3/4. Rye gained 1/16, with July 83 1/2 to 83 3/4, September 84 1/2 to 84 3/4, and December 85 1/2 to 85 3/4.

Weather conditions in the Canadian northwest are attracting considerable attention, and unless rains come shortly a crop scare is expected to get under way. Liverpool closed 1/4 lower to 1/4 higher, raising after an early break on prospects that American farm relief would go into effect immediately and on a better inquiry for cash wheat. The seaboard reported 800,000 to 900,000 bu. of wheat in Manitoba to the United Kingdom.

Country Sells Old Corn. The country is apparently taking advantage of all upturns in the corn market to sell old grain to argue, and local handlers reported the purchase of 250,000 bu. in all positions, part of which will go to other markets, although it is said that the corn is being held by sales of futures here. Somewhat less favorable comments regarding the new crop were received from parts of the belt due to unfavorable weather, and there was fair buying early, but the upturn brought in a profit taking, and the finish was in a fraction of the bottom. Strength in wheat and the farm relief talk had a some effect on sentiment early, and good part of the trade was of a local character.

Comment on the new crop was somewhat less favorable, due largely to excessive rains in parts of the belt. Locals were moderate sellers, while commission houses bought the September and December, and cash interests took 100,000 bushels in rye was light and the market early influenced, with a good class of buying on the minor declines.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

The United Kingdom was a fair buyer of wheat in the last few days, and in positions estimated at 800,000 to 900,000 bu., largely Manitoba wheat. Local handlers sold 13,000 bu. of wheat, 55,000 bu. of corn, 15,000 bu. of oats, and 1,000 bu. of rye to the domestic trade, with 150,000 bu. of wheat, 100,000 bu. of corn and 100,000 bu. of rye sold to go to store.
